The new Autumn Hats show a tendency towards large shapes.

The question of the moment isn't it. The color, shape and material of your fall hat, uncommonly smart looking with the correct, refining touch, almost all are individual, and range all the way from a small hat one wears with a suit, to the broader brimmed creations seen on dress occasions.

TO THE TAXPAYERS OF NAPANEE

Taxes levied by the Town of Napanee must be paid by Oct. 1st., and you have no doubt noticed that the total rate amounts to 44½ mills, few realize that a small proportion of this is levied for the current expenses of the town.

This rate is made up as a 15 mill school rate, an 8 mill levy to pay our County Rate, debentures take another 8 mills, or a total of 31 mills for Schools, County Rate and Debentures, leaving 10½ mills for the general expenses of the town.

This 10½ mills amounts to about $19,000, which was appropriated approximately as follows : Street Lighting, $3,000 ; Fire Protection and Hydrant Rental, $4,050 ; Police and Market, $2,050 ; Salaries, $2,200 ; Streets and Miscellaneous $7,700.

The roads of the town are now in splendid condition and should not require as large an expenditure next year, as they have in the past. A new heating plant was installed in the Town Hall this year at a cost of $750. By careful management the current expenses of the town will be reduced materially next year and the rate lowered one or 1½ mills. The only other way the rate can be lowered is by decreasing the school expenditures and by a lower County Rate.

LENNOX FAIR

A Large Attendance and a Splendid Exhibition.

Despite the threatening weather and rain the Fair drew a large attendance on Tuesday and a splendid crowd on Wednesday. The rain on Wednesday night spoiled the attendance somewhat on Thursday.

The formal opening of the first day took place on the arrival at the grounds of the procession of school children. The five hundred public school children assembled at the West Ward school about one o'clock p.m., and there formed procession, headed by the Napanee Citizens Band, and proceeded to the Park. These kiddies represented the town and county schools ; four outside schools from the townships of Richmond and Camden were there. This successful parade was under the able management of Messrs. M. C. Bogart, Alpine Wood and Principal Trenouth, accompanied by a large staff of teachers.

The Palace, or main exhibition hall, probably attracted the first attention of the visitor to the fair. On entering the building one was charmed by the brilliant and pleasing display of fruit and flowers which adorned the long centre table, extending the whole length of the hall. There were some splendid specimens of apples and other fruits, and the gladiolo, asters, dahlias, zinnias, flowers were also very fine. Gladiolus, dahlias, roses, etc., etc., vieing with each other for admiration, the whole forming the aggregation of a blaze of beauty and color.

Surrounding this fine display, tastefully arranged booths proved very attractive. Beginning on the left hand was a fine exhibit of ladies' work, then The Haines Shoe Store exhibit of boots, shoes and travelling goods ; then Mason and Risch pianos, etc. ; next comes the Art exhibition of paintings, drawings and other work of art from local talent, all of which is highly credible to all concerned. The next booth contained a fine showing of pianos and other musical instruments by VanLuven, of Napanee. Then an interesting exhibit of Spring Kent Co., Ltd. represented by Arthur A. Sills, Belleville, including hardwood flooring etc. Next booth was occupied by the Baby Clinic under the auspices of the Napanee Women's Institute, which was instrumental in inducing the Provincial Board of Health to send Dr. W. J. Bell and Miss Osborne to take charge of the Clinic. During the time the visitor has arrived at the west entrance of the building and on either side of the door could be seen the glass cases containing specimens of homemade pies, hommade bread and buns, also butter and dressed chickens. Next in continuation to the left the following booths : W. D. Mildmer, manufacturer of lumber and builders requisites and dealer in British coal. The Gibbard Furniture Co. Ltd., display of handsome black walnut bedroom suite. Roman Meal Co. Ltd., exhibit of Roman Meal. Churchwoman's Guild display and sale of useful and ornamental articles. Hydro Electric Commission display of utilities. Davy & Allison, stoves and hardware. The Graham Co., ladies' and men's furnishings. Thus the visitors having returned to point of starting finds another display of ladies' fancy work.

In a tent nearby was a grand display of grain and vegetables, which go to prove the excellent growth in the grain and garden stuff during the past summer.

In the poultry house were found some infinite variety of fowls, which do credit to this district, and the prize winners took as if they were worthy of their honors.

In the sheep and pig pens were fine specimens and there was a large number of entries.

In the stock barn were a goodly showing of the cattle that make Lennox and Addington noted as a shiring county of no mean order. The horses, which were housed in the stock barn, were a fine lot of animals and showed their good breeding.

A good midway attracted much patronage, particularly by the young people. There was a merry-go-round, sideshows, a pony and dog show, kewpie booths and so forth.

Added to the heavy rains of Monday the driving-track was not in fit condition for horse races scheduled to take place and Tuesday's races were postponed to Wednesday. Thursday's races were cancelled on account of the condition of the track.

A baseball match between Tamworth and a pick-up team, owing to Deseronto's non-appearance, drew a good crowd. The result was 8 to 2 in favor of Tamworth.

Much enjoyment was evinced by the large concourse of people who witnessed the splendid exhibition of horsemanship given by the men of the Royal Military College Academy, Kingston.

On Tuesday and Wednesday evenings the grounds and buildings were brilliantly lighted ; the midway was in full swing and happy crowds were having a real good time. Of course the most important event was the baby show. The day of the poor old bachelor, who acted as judge, and made for himself a very few friends and a great many enemies is gone forever. The judging of babies now-a-days is a real scientific affair. In this instance the babies who wanted to have their names enrolled upon the scroll of fame, were taken to the booth of the baby clinic, where they were stripped of their clothing, weighed on a scale whose accuracy could not be contradicted, carefully measured, and thoroughly investigated in every manner known to medical science. There is no "perhaps" about the following results of the competition for the judges were experts —Dr. J. W. Bell and Nurse Osborne, of the Provincial Board of Health.

The winners were :

(a) Best baby boy 3 months to one year, James Howie.

(b) Best baby boy, 1 year to 18 months, Thomas Macdonald.

(c) Best baby girl, 3 months to 1 year ; 1st, Deleslyan Barrager ; 2nd, Geneva Walsh.

(d) Best baby girl, 1 year to 18 months, Irene Walsh.

Special—The best baby—who won 90 per cent. out of a possible 100 per cent. : Orvilla Coathup.

Dr. Bell and Nurse Osborne were at the clinic booth for the duration of the fair and a large number of parents were at the booth each day with their children, seeking advice.

The singing of Albert Grattan, a twelve-year-old Kingston boy, was highly appreciated on Tuesday evening.

On Wednesday evening a splendid concert programme was given in the Palace by Toronto talent. The attendance was fair, but no doubt many stayed away on account of the rain. The entertainment was one of the best features of the fair and it was a treat to hear the artists.

The dance in the Armouries on Thursday evening was well attended, but no doubt the rain also spoiled the attendance somewhat at this event.

Get the Cream of the Trade

"What lovely styles! How do you manage to get all these, delightful novelties?" said the new customer as she looked around her.

"I got tired of seeing my customers boarding the trains to buy elsewhere, just because I didn't have some novelty that was being advertised."

"Whenever a new style makes a decided hit, the wholesaler or manufacturer's salesman calls me on Long Distance, and tells me about it, and I order a few."

"I haven't seen prettier veils, smarter stockings or gloves, georgette crêpes or ginghams anywhere. And I see you have the new music, too. How perfectly splendid. They leave me no excuse at all for going up to town to buy."

That's just one of the many things Long Distance does for small-town merchants, enabling Dry Goods, Hardware, Grocery, Paint and Shoe Stores to obtain new styles immediately and cater to the progressive people in their town — the cream of the trade.

Arctic Seal-Stalking.

Seal-stalking in the Arctic is a much more ticklish business than in the Antarctic, where there were no "predatory animals till the explorers came." In the Arctic the seal has to reckon with the Polar bear, says Stefansson in "The Friendly Arctic." "Your cue is, then," he says, "to begin playing seal when you are about 300 yards away. You must not crawl head on, for a man in that position is not so convincingly like a seal as he would be in side view. You must therefore crawl side-on, or crawfish fashion. The easiest seal-like thing to do is to lift your head ten to fifteen inches, spend ten or fifteen seconds looking round, then drop your head on the ice again. By doing this half a dozen times at thirty or fifty-second intervals, you will very likely convince your seal that you are another seal." Lulled by such skilful stalking, the seal drops into a peaceful nap. You are, and if it is hit you rush in to seize the seal and prevent him slithering in his usual down-the-icy slope into the water and out of reach. Again and again Stefansson shows the infinite patience of the born hunter who never wastes a cartridge: "I secured an entire band of twenty-three (caribou) in twenty-seven shots" indicates his deadliness.

Homeless Persons In London.

A census of homeless persons in London taken on February 10, showed that in central wards there were 276 men, 11 women and two children. The largest number recorded at any census since 1914. Only eight persons were found sheltering under arches or on staircases. In licensed common lodging houses 13,076 were accommodated as compared with 14,082 in 1921 and 20,173 in 1914.

PARLIAMENTARY LETTER

Kitchener, Waterloo County and the county of North York have vied with one another during the week in doing honor to the Prime Minister, Rt. Hon. W. L. MacKenzie King, who has visited his birth-place and the county which he now represents in Parliament, renewing old acquaintances and carrying out a message of good-will. Men, women and children turned out en masse at all points visited by the Prime Minister to hear his speeches and to voice their confidence in his leadership.

At Kitchener, Rt. Hon. Mr. King was honored alike by men of all political parties, and to them he voiced the need of good-will among all the elements of this Dominion if Canada was to take her proper place among the nations of the earth. People of different classes, races and creeds must work together, bearing no ill-will, but co-operating for the benefit of the whole Dominion, Rt. Hon. Mr. King urged, and maintaining the best traditions and beliefs if they would continue to prosper. The war had given rise to a spirit of ill-will and had brought to light many prejudices between the people of one great Dominion. These prejudices and evidences of ill-will must be wiped out and the government, as far as possible, stood prepared to take the lead in seeking to get back to the channels of good-will and respect for the rights of minorities.

The announcement of the government's immigration policy which is one of settlement on the farms of Canada of the right class of people to make farming a success, has brought encouragement from many outside points. Great Britain has welcomed it and it is expected that during the course of the next month or so there will be further development following the visit to Ottawa of Col. Amery from London. People look for the next few years are that Canada will build up her population immensely by admitting the class of people from the older countries who will be of value to this Dominion as agriculturists.

The Federal and Provincial Governments will co-operate in bringing from Europe and from the United States the proper class of immigrants, and in seeing that these new citizens are given the fair start on their way to prosperous Canadian citizenship. Canadians who have gone to New England States within recent years will be repatriated as far as possible and the surroundings of both these and the newcomers will be made as congenial as possible as far as schools, etc., are concerned. Household workers are also to be encouraged to come to Canada, and efforts will be further made to bring from the Old Country teen-age boys and girls who will grow up into good citizens.

The matter of an immigration policy has been under careful consideration for some time, and the announcement by Hon. Chas. Stewart of what was proposed for the settlement of the vacant lands of the Dominion has been given an impetus to the Canada-ward movement which has been evident in the older countries since the termination of the war.

Further action by the King Ministry, through Hon. James Murdock, to avert a strike in the shop crafts of the Canadian railways and thus prevent a serious tie-up of transportation facilities at this time, when the movement of the grain to the lake ports is expected to be so great, has resulted in the shopmen continuing at work pending the outcome of further negotiations between themselves and the employing companies. Upon receipt of the men's rejection of the proposals of the Smith conciliation board, Hon. Mr. Murdock asked the men to continue at work and attempt further to settle their difficulties by negotiations. "Canada deserves something better than a strike," the minister urged, and he succeeded in keeping the wheels turning.

The efficacy of Canadian legislative machinery for the arbitration of disputes in public utilities, found in the Industrial Disputes Investigation Act, which was passed by the previous Liberal Government, aided greatly in good sense of workers and employers alike, has saved Canada from a serious situation this year. On the other side of the line, with no such machinery available for the prevention of strikes, the railways have been tied up for weeks on practically the same issues as faced the Canadian workers. Here, however, the work continued at work, and there appears to be every prospect that the King government's attempt to keep the railways running will be successful as is reached will prove successful.

Introducing business administration when only a few of that desirable condition of affairs has prevailed for many years, namely in the Post Office Department, Hon. Charles Murphy, Postmaster General has made some radical changes in conditions there and as a result the whole country will reap the benefits. Some time ago Mr. Murphy inaugurated a system of fortnightly conferences between the heads of all branches of the Post Office Department with a view to promoting co-operation and bringing the department on to real business basis. Mr. Murphy has now called a conference of postal district officials to open in Ottawa on October 2, to bring about an interchange of ideas and promote further efficiency which will be greatly to the interest of the public of the Dominion. All provinces of the dominion are to be represented by experienced postal officials and it is likely that this conference will be followed by others in due course. One of the questions to be discussed will be the agenda for the conference between Canadian and United States postal officials which is to be held.

A NEW BULLETIN ON FERTILIZERS FOR FIELD CROPS.

(Experimental Farms Note.)

There has recently been issued from the Division of Chemistry of the Experimental Farms System a comprehensive bulletin on the subject of Fertilizers for Field Crops. It is the work of the Dominion Chemist and the Soil Fertility Specialist, both of whom have a large and long experience with fertilizers in the laboratory and field and who have conducted experiments with fertilizers for a number of years in every province of the Dominion.

The bulletin is, as has been said, comprehensive in its nature; the endeavour has been to treat not only of fertilizers—their nature, function as plant foods and application—but to discuss the position of fertilizers in a rational method of soil management towards increasing crop yields. Further, it takes up from the practical as well as the scientific standpoint the nature and value of farm manures, of green manuring, of liming, etc., and considers how all of these may be used in the upkeep and increase of soil fertility.

It is eminently practical throughout, being intended as a guide for the man on the land who is considering the use of fertilizers and will be found instructive and of interest to all who are looking for definite, concise information on the all-important matter of increased crop yields and the economic improvement of their soils.

An important feature of the bulletin is that the conclusions and advice given are the direct outcome of investigational work carried on in the Dominion, and this respect it is the first publication of its kind in Canada and marks a distinct advance on all previous bulletins dealig with the subject.

UNUSUAL REPEATERS.

One Man Was Hanged Twice For the Same Crime.

Did you ever hear of a vicar who had been twice presented to, twice accepted, and twice done duty in a living at the same parish?

Such a happening is almost unique, yet it happened some years ago to Rev. Canon John Eddowes, who held a vicarage in Bradford, England. He was thoroughly beloved throughout his parish, so much so that, when he was offered preferment again and again, he refused it simply because his people begged him not to go.

At length the then bishop of Ripon once more offered the canon a most important post, making it very clear that he would be particularly pleased if Mr. Eddowes would accept it. The vicar did so, and in due course another vicar was appointed to the parish. A few years later the new vicar died, and all Bradford roused itself and determined to get the beloved canon back again. Thousands of folk signed petitions begging the bishop to re-appoint Mr. Eddowes. It was said on good authority that every person of full age in the parish signed the petition!

Neither bishop nor canon could possibly stand out against such an amazing show of love and popularity. So the vicar was once more offered the living, accepted it, and was again inducted.

This is stated to be the only instance of its kind in England since the case of Lancelot Andrews, over 200 years previously! So it has remained since, and is likely to remain for a long time yet, absolutely unique.

How many men can boast that they have twice married the same woman, and that, too, without being divorced from her, or merely adding the church ceremony to one already carried out at the registry office? Such is the claim of a man who came to Dr. Salter advice at Willesden court recently.

This man explained that he was married in 1916, whilst an instructor in the army. Later he was reduced to the ranks, deserted, and joined another unit under a different name. In order that his wife might get the usual allowance (which had been stopped by his former conduct), he remarried her under his new name, went to France, was wounded, and awarded a pension, which he was now receiving under his latest name.

The clerk said that was practically committing bigamy with one's own wife.

Equally unique, surely is the strange case where a man was twice executed in public. This seems impossible; but the affair, which concerned a man named Richard Banks, actually took place years ago in the old King's Bench Prison in England.

Richard Banks was publicly hanged, cut down, and then conveyed to St. George's, Southwark, for burial, under the still belief that he was quite dead. But after the "corpse" had lain three hours, awaiting interment, it was noticed that it was revolving signs of life after a while the man became so much better as to seem almost as well as ever; whereupon he was taken back to the place of execution, and the ghastly performance was repeated, this time with perfect success.

A member of a noted family in the peerage got a license from the Faculty office to marry a certain lady at St. Margaret's, Westminster. On a certain day he went to another registry office in London and got a license to marry quite a different woman, so as to be ready at once to marry his wife if the first woman refused.

He then went to the Faculty Office for still another license — to marry a third woman! He appointed out that only a day or two before he had obtained a similar license for a different bride.

"Just so," was the calm reply. "Indeed, I have already two distinct licenses in my pocket to wed two separate ladies, and want a third, if possible. I am resolved to have whichever woman is first asked that, if she does not at once accept, another is waiting."

THE PROBLEM OF THE MENTALLY DEFECTIVE

DR. J. G. SHEARER.

The Mentally defective constitute, by no fault of their own, one of the greatest and most perplexing of social problems. This fact is all too little understood and appreciated.

It is usually estimated that from 1½ to 2 per cent. of the population are below par mentally. On that basis there are in Canada from 135,000 to 180,000 of these unfortunates. Some are idiots, utterly helpless and unable to care for themselves. Others are imbeciles, a grade higher than idiots, but unable to support themselves, and requiring constant oversight and protection. Between the imbecile and the normal are the much larger proportion who, because they are not easily detected, constitute the greater menace. After they reach adult years they remain mere children in mentality and self-control, yet possessed with all the passions, propensities and desires of adults.

It is easy to see what a menace this combination constitutes, to themselves and to the community.

Their sexual propensities are unusually strong, and they have neither mental vision to forsee the consequences of indulgence, nor moral self-control to govern their passions. They mutiply twice as fast as normal folk, and always reproduce their own kind and this quite regardless of whether they are married or not. In the Board of Education offices in Vancouver, is a family chart showing that some years ago an alcoholic man married a feeble-minded woman. Twelve children were born. Three fortunately died young. The nine who grew up are all feeble-minded. One of these, a young woman now in her twenties, is the illegitimate mother of five children, all feeble-minded. Fourteen mental defectives, each one a social problem, from one marriage that never should have been allowed.

It is estimated by those best qualified to judge that two-thirds of all prostitution is due to feeble mindedness. Moreover a large proportion of the children born out of marriage have feeble-minded mothers. These women living in promiscuous sexual indulgence soon develop venereal diseases, and infect all their male associates. Many of these associates are normal young men who afterwards marry, and infect their innocent wives, and pass on the terrible heritage of these terrible diseases to their children. It is estimated that not less than forty per cent. of venereal disease is due to this source.

At least fifty per cent. of all crimes in general are committed by these unfortunates. Their uncontrolled passions lead to assault, common or indecent, to lascivarism, to murder, to burglary, to banditry, to the demoralization of children of both sexes.

Many of the epidemics of vice in schools is due to the presence of a small group of feeble-minded girls or boys who, by normal children, especially boys, are by them led into vice and the evil rapidly spreads. Wrong that is thus done that will curse these youths for years if not for life.

It is false economy to provide for the care, training or treatment of these deficients. A large part of the enormous cost of administration of Justice, police courts, gaols, penitentiaries, asylories, etc., could be saved if adequate provision were made for their segregation, specialized training, and the prevention of the reproduction of their kind. A subsequent article will however deal with the remedy for this great social evil.

Ping-Pong.

Nobody seems to know who invented the game of ping-pong.

It is said to have been first played forty years ago in an Oxford student's room, where the young men started to play it with cigar-box lids for bats, champagne corks for balls, and a row of books for a net. They invented the rules as they went along. But we have no record of their names.

From this impromptu beginning evolved a game called table tennis, which originally was played with a small india rubber ball. Eventually a celluloid ball was introduced, and the game was then called gassima.

It made little or no progress until 1899, when it occurred to someone to christen it ping-pong. In two years it became a craze, and now that it is becoming popular again there is a suggestion that it should be known by the more dignified name of table tennis.

CAN ADD TO STATURE

SCIENCE HAS MADE IMPORTANT DISCOVERY.

Pituitary Gland Affects the Growth of All Higher Forms of Animal Life—Prof. Allen Thinks That It May Be Used as Food to Increase Size.

Can a boy or a girl be made to grow faster and taller and better developed physically by means outside the ordinary scope of nature?

A new and very remarkable discovery strongly suggests that this may be possible. It is described by Dr. Bennett M. Allen, who, to illustrate the theory, mentions some recent experiments of his own with salamanders.

He found it practicable to produce these reptiles of abnormal size—giants, in fact. He thinks that perhaps the rate of growth and the stature of children could be greatly augmented by the same treatment.

In one experiment, two salamanders were chosen from one litter. They were therefore of the same age, as well as the same parentage. The conditions under which they were kept were exactly the same. But one of them was fed on earthworms, the ordinary food of those lizards, while the other was fed on something else.

The earthworm-fed salamander grew to normal size. The one fed on something else grew twice as big. Speaking exactly, its weight was 96 per cent. greater than that of its brother. It was a giant of its species—a salamander the like of which for bigness was never before seen.

It was almost a miracle. But the explanation is simply that the "something else" fed to the freak salamander was the ground-up substance of the "pituitary gland," obtained from the sheep.

It has long been known that this gland has importantly to do with growth in human beings and in the lower animals. If in a child it be under-developed, the youngster will grow up; he or she will be a dwarf. If it be diseased, the person afflicted, is liable to become a giant.

What happens apparently in the latter case is that the diseased gland produces its peculiar secretion (which is growth-making stuff) in abnormal quantities. But later on it becomes functionally weak to such an extent that the yield of secretion becomes unduly small, and the sufferer, progressively enfeebled, dies. Giants never live long.

If a human skull be examined, there will be found near the middle of the bottom of it a small cavity into which the end of a finger may be thrust. This cavity, during the lifetime of the individual, is occupied by the pituitary body — a bit of structure half-gland and half-nerve stuff, about which science knows virtually nothing, except that it influences growth. Together with the thyroid gland (in the throat), the two cooperating in some mysterious way, it governs growth and controls it.

The same gland, correspondingly situated, is found in other animals. It can be obtained from the sheep; and, inasmuch as sheep are being slaughtered in great numbers all the time, the material is easily to be had in unlimited quantity. The glands, dried, ground to a fine powder, and sterilized, can be fed to animals, or, if it shall be deemed expedient, to young children.

It is intended next to make experiments with puppies. If, as is thought likely, they can be caused to grow faster and bigger by feeding them with the pituitary substance, the presumption is that the same would be true of children. A dog's physiologic reactions are in all ways much like those of human beings; for which reason it is that medical science tries out every new idea on the dog. In this case, it will be easy enough to determine the question by taking a litter of puppies, giving two or three of them plenty of milk and dog biscuits; and feeding the others on pituitary gland stuff. If those fed on the latter material grow more rapidly and attain greater size, it will be inferable that the same treatment would produce corresponding results with boys and girls. With the puppies, of course, or with other animals, it would not be to be a series of experiments to determine with certainty the fact.

Parents want their children to grow big. They are ambitious for tall sons and stately daughters. Perhaps this wish of theirs can be accomplished by feeding them in their early years with pituitary substance. Suppose that six inches could be added to a boy's ultimate stature, with a corresponding number of extra inches around the chest, by giving him a tablet of gland-stuff with each meal. Would not that be well worth while?

Even more important it would be to give such treatment to children who are under-sized or under-developed. They might be made to gain stature rapidly and to achieve a lusty boyhood or girlhood. Viewing the possibilities "in the large," what a prospect for the physical improvement of the human race is offered by this new discovery!

Says Prof. Allen: "The experiments already made give hope that we may in this way be able to stimulate size-growth — to augment growth and modify development in human beings."

He explains that dwarfs are persons who, by reason of under-development of the pituitary gland, fail to become physically mature. Though mentally normal, their bodily proportions remain infantile.

TALK OF "COMING WAR"

GERMAN WRITERS ARE BUSY AGAIN ALONG OLD LINES.

Romancers Are Already Talking About the Possibilities of Revenge and They Declare That the People Must Be Kept Alert and Hopeful So That Country Will Not Lapse Into Despondency.

In an article in the Fortnightly Francis Gribble shows concern about the "coming war" books that are pouring from the printing presses in Germany. Some are "romances of wars of the future," and others "are essays in historical philosophy." A Col Bauer says in the preface of an ambitious pamphlet: "It is true that we are at the moment incapable of taking our revenge, disunited as we are, and torn by internal dissensions, but the thing we have to do is to keep our people alert and prevent them from lapsing into despondency." The romances described by Mr. Gribble are calculated to do just that thing, but they are so extravagant in invention that no sober-minded German would be influenced by them. "Die drei Kommenden Kriege" is a specimen, says the New York Times. It begins with the observation that international relations are always "in a state of flux and change." Illustrations are given.

Napoleon rode roughshod over the German people, but died a prisoner on the rock of St. Helena. Prince William, of Prussia, a child when the Prussian court fled from the might of Napoleon, lived to be proclaimed German emperor in the Hall of Mirrors at Versailles. The author then argues that in the late war Germany was the "victim of the jealousy of her ambitious and covetous neighbors." They are already estranged and bickering, he maintains. They will have to settle their differences by fighting. The war is then staged. It must be admitted that the exordium is an ingenious appeal to the German people. War will break out in the east, the United States and Great Britain confronting a Japan entrenched in China to avoid risking her fleet and to defend her interests with Chinese armies. But the American and British fleets will not be denied. The Japanese navy is destroyed. France now joins her old allies in "a gigantic expedition beside which the unfortunate Gallipoli affair was child's play," a campaign against the Japanese and their auxiliaries in China by way of Russia and Siberia. Germany is called upon to assist the Western allies. At this point the author's imagination runs wild.

He says German technical skill and genius will celebrate their triumphs. Germany will be transformed into a camp on the line of communication for English, French and American troops. There will be no talk then of economies, and no quibbling about the Versailles treaty. The cry will be: "Germany, your genius for invention, the hard fists of your workingmen and the hard heads of your technical experts, your handicraftsmen, your merchants, we need them all. And we want your physicians and your surgeons, your hospitals and their staffs, and your model hygienic appliances, we want them all." Against such a combination Japan will be impotent. She is punished for her treachery to Germany in 1914. The author is somewhat embarrassed by the reparations due France, which he had forgotten, but he makes dramatic use of them. England deserts her ally and prepares for an inevitable war with the United States. And Germany becomes a partner of England in a third world war. The internal strength of America decides the issue with England. The Germans invade France and overwhelm her armies. Germany recovers all her lost colonies and seizes those of France. "Thus," concludes the author, "with America supreme at sea and Germany supreme on land, the peace of the world will be immediately secured."

This wild melodrama is supposed to be the most solid and logical of the German "coming war" fictions. Mr. Gribble seeks to account for the impression it makes on him by averring that "it is the spirit of dozens of books," all striking the same keynote of the restoration of Germany to a great world power. The sales of these books, he says, are immense. Francis Gribble is himself the author of historical romances in which there are high lights and deep shadows and many inventions. Perhaps that is why he takes Col. Bauer so seriously. He is sure that the Treaty of Rapallo signifies a military alliance between Russia and Germany which Great Britain and her late allies will have to reckon with on the battlefield sooner or later.

He is sure that Germany, far from being repentant, is plotting a war of revenge. He dimly perceives, however, that there are Germans who have had enough of war "and have little time to think of anything except to-day's work and to-morrow's needs." But he does not allow them any influence in shaping or controlling the designs of the military party. He forgets that there have been tremendous demonstrations in Berlin and other cities against war and militarism and against war and devastation.

Giving Birds a Bad Name.

The U. S. Biological Survey warns Americans against charging the crimes of the English sparrow to other members of the sparrow family, which, although essentially seed-eating, performs great service in its raids on insects. Even jays, crows, ravens, and blackbirds, when not too numerous, do about as much good as harm. The best policy seems to be neither deliberately to persecute nor protect them. The owl, too, has a bad name, yet 50 varieties feed on rodents and have other useful habits, against which the occasional murder of a chicken is negligible.

MINISTERS ABROAD.

Costs of Trips to Old Land In Wartime.

Expenses of Canadian Ministers, who went to Europe during the war and since, were the subject of a return which was brought down in the House of Commons recently. The return covered the travels of more than a dozen Ministers of the Crown, including the regimes of both Sir Robert Borden and Rt. Hon. Arthur Meighen.

It opens with the trip of the Hon. J. F. Tolmie to England, respecting the cattle embargo, which cost $5,181. Hon. A. L. Sifton's expenses while in Paris at the Peace Conference were $10,807.

Sir Robert Borden's name appears three times in the records. His voyage to England in 1915 cost $4,232, while his expenses in 1917 were $3,000. These amounts were advanced to him by the Privy Council office. From the Department of External Affairs for his visit at the time of the Peace Conference, he was advanced $14,733, and returned to the department $7,471, making the expenses $7,262.

Mr. Meighen's name appears twice. When he was across the water as Minister of the Interior he was advanced $1,500; he expended $827; refunded $540, and the balance of $132 was used on western trips. In addition his journey to the conference of Premier last summer cost $8,018.

Sir Thomas White went over as Minister of Finance in 1916, and the cost was $2,800. Hon. C. J. Doherty was advanced $7,253 for his trip to Paris, and refunded $1,424, leaving an expenditure of $5,829.

The expenditures of the Department of Militia and Defence in connection with European trips of its Ministers, totalled $29,209. This was divided as follows: Sir Sam Hughes, $16,755; Sir Edward Kemp, $1,225; Hon. S. C. Mewburn, $2,049; Hon. Hugh Guthrie, $9,180. In addition to this, $219 was advanced by the High Commissioner to cover the expenses of Hon. Hugh Guthrie to the Financial Conference at Brussels.

Hon. P. E. Blondin expended $5,000 during his visit to the Postal Union Conference at Madrid in 1920. Hon. J. A. Calder spent $4,088 on a trip on behalf of the Department of Immigration.

Hon. N. W. Rowell spent $2,000 in 1918, when he went over to attend the Imperial War Cabinet. There is no record in Privy Council of the expenses incurred by Mr. Rowell when in attendance at the League of Nations.

Jack Tars as Citizens.

The restriction of naval armaments following the Washington agreement is likely to have the effect of bringing about reductions in the personnel of the British navy. As a result many naval officers and men will be looking for new careers in the overseas portions of the Empire.

With the object of giving the officers and men under his command an opportunity to hear something about Canada from the lips of a Canadian, Commodore Boyle of the Royal Naval Barracks, Devonport, England, recently invited Mr. Wm. C. Noxon, the Agent-General for Ontario in the British Isles, to give an address to a gathering of bluejackets at that great naval base. On the occasion of the Agent-General's visit there were over 5,000 naval men in the Devonport barracks, many of them receiving special courses of training in gunnery and other branches of naval work.

There was a very large attendance of bluejackets and officers at Mr. Noxon's lecture, which was descriptive of Ontario. The speaker gave a racy description of the extent and resources of Ontario, its products, good roads, hydro-electric power, the character of its population, its farms and farm products, and spoke in optimistic terms of the great future which lies ahead for a province so richly endowed with natural resources, and with such an enterprising, progressive people.

The lecture was rendered additionally attractive owing to the fact that it was illustrated by three Ontario Government films and a number of lantern slides.

Grass That Went to Sea.

As you walk or paddle amongst the pools left by the receding tide you cannot help noticing the long strands of the green weed that fringe them. Its leaves, which look like so many ribbons, are less than half an inch in width, though often they are three or four feet in length.

This particular weed is called grass-wrack, and strange to say, it is not really a seaweed at all. It is a land plant which for some reason has taken to a marine life.

If you examine it carefully you will find red flowers growing upon it, each encased in a kind of sheath formed by one of the shorter leaves. No proper seaweed blossoms in this way.

Why it should have chosen to go to sea instead of remaining on land no one can say, but probably it found that it was easier to live under water than on dry land. In some places it is so common that it is harvested like hay, and is used, after it has been dried, instead of straw for packing glass, china, and other delicate objects.

Ammunition and Arithmetic.

Some patient German professors have ascertained that the amount of barbed wire made in Germany during the war would be sufficient to erect a barbed wire hedge, 70 feet 2.85 inches thick, right round the republic. They estimate, too, that the sand-bags turned out would, if piled, make a wall, 8.5625 feet thick and 9.84375 feet high, from Berlin to Constantinople.

If all the artillery ammunition manufactured in 1917 had had to be placed on one train, that train would have had its engine at Hamburg station, while the guard's van would have been in danger of falling into the Bosphorus.

It used to be said that it took a soldier's weight in lead to knock him out of the fighting line. How interesting to learn what weight of metal was needed to do that in the great war.

The Hague.

The Hague has a population of 360,000. It is located in southern Holland, and is the seat of the Dutch Government. It is a fashionable and handsome city with fine streets and avenues and attractive squares. A seaside resort is located only a short distance from the capital. Many treaties have been signed at The Hague. Among these were the treaty of the triple alliance signed by England, Sweden and the Netherlands; of the triple alliance in 1717 by France, England and Holland; the treaty of peace between Holland and France in 1763. The Hague tribunal was established in 1899 by twenty-four powers to facilitate international arbitration.

SUCH PAINS AS THIS WOMAN HAD

Two Months Could Not Turn in Bed. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Finally Restored Health

Seattle, Washington.—"I had dragging pains first and could not stand on my feet, then I had chills and fever and such pains in my right side and a hard lump there. I could not turn myself in bed and could not sleep. I was this way for over two months, trying everything any one told me, until my sister brought me a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I took it regularly until all the hard pains had left me and I was able to be up and to do my work again. The hard lump left my side and I feel splendid in all ways. I know of many women it has helped."—Mrs. G. Richardson, 4040 Oreas St., Seattle, Washington.

This is another case where Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound brought results after trying everything any one told me" had failed.

If you are suffering from pain, nervousness and are always tired; if you are low spirited and good for nothing, take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. You may not only relieve the present distress, but prevent the development of more serious trouble.

Special Exhibition Attraction at the Strand.

The Arlie Marks Stock Co. played to packed houses on Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, September 11, 12, 13 and 14. The following plays were well given: "A Good For Nothing Husband," "The Girl From out Yonder," and "When the Joker was Wild." As an actor Mr. Jim Perrin needs no introduction to an audience as he certainly is one of the best actors on the stage. In the company were Mrs. Robert Dayton, as leading lady; Mrs. Secord and Mr. Robert Dayton, capable actors who filled their roles to perfection, and to Mr. Wedd Chamberlain much credit is due in making the company so successful. Mr. W. Wallbank, in his Character Roles, was excellent. Mr. Tom Dillon ably supported the company. The Kiltie Band is a credit to this little company. The following players composed the Band: Pipe, Major MacDonald and Tom Dillon; Snare Drums, Mrs. Walbourn and Miss Stewart. Miss Peggy Logan, on the bass drum, won her way into the hearts of those who heard her play. So large was the crowd on Wednesday night that two complete performances were given. This splendid company should pack every theatre in which it plays. Mr. Perrin certainly understands picking out actors. We also wish to thank, personally, Mr. Will and Harry Boyle for their kindness in loaning us on Wednesday night, the Colemon gas lamps on account of lights being out of commission due to the storm, and to the others who loaned property ties to make the shows so successful, and on behalf of Mr. Perrin, the excellent manager of the Arlie Marks Company No. 1, and Mr. Fred Kane, manager of the Strand, also Mr. Maker, the proprietor, for their splendid patronage during the Company's visit at the Strand Theatre.

Monsters Attack Fishermen.

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld., Sept. 18.—Sea monsters, which are reported to be from forty to sixty feet long have attacked boats engaged in fishing out of British Harbor, Trinity Bay, and fishermen are afraid to go on the grounds. A large school of these monsters, of which no description has been received, appeared off the coast a few days ago, and is still in the bay. An organized expedition will be sent from the settlement of Heart's Content to the fisheries. Several boats which went out recently narrowly escaped being swamped by these huge denizens of the deep. The appearance of the school has been reported to the Department of Marine and Fisheries by the telegraph operator at British Harbor.

THE EXHIBITS.

The following special reports of some of the finest displays at the Fair will prove interesting reading and should repay readers for the time expended on their perusal:

THE J. J. HAINES SHOE HOUSES

It would be hard to find a finer display than that shown by the above firm in their tastefully arranged booth. The variety of the goods they handle were shown to good advantage. All sorts of like best to be had in boots, shoes, rubbers and also trunks, suit cases, club bags and other traveling requirements. Be sure and visit their store when requiring anything in their line. You will be sure of service and good value. No trouble to show goods. They have large stores also at Smith's Falls and Belleville.

THE GRAHAM COMPANY.

This year, as in former years, The Graham Company's booth was one of the most attractive spots in the Palace and the splendid specimen of Men's Clothing shown will remind people that there is a good place in town to get good value for their money and goods that are fashionable and of excellent quality. Amongst the exhibits were 20th Century Brand, Cambridge Clothes, Forsythe Shirts, etc. For dress or work clothes, men's furnishings or hats, caps, gloves or mitts.—If you want quality, style, value for your money and a square deal every time, go to Graham's.

MASON & RISCH, LIMITED.

One of the best attractions at the Fair was the magnificent display of pianos shown by the Mason & Risch Company, Limited, of Toronto. It was an exhibit worthy of the great firm and the staff in charge deserved the many compliments showered upon them for the wonderful music they provided. The instruments were viewed by large crowds continually, their beauty being an outstanding feature and their tone unsurpassed. The tone of the instruments called forth great praise from the crowds who collected at the stand to hear Miss Peacock, of Toronto, demonstrate them.

H. L. VANLUVEN.

The well and favorable known Gerhard Heintzman Pianos and Phonograph was well represented by our local dealer, H. L. VanLuven. The Gerhard Heintzman Piano used for the entertainments, drew a very favorable comment from the Toronto artist, and other players, and the tone was much admired by all who are considered capable critics of good instrumental music. The fine stock of these splendid pianos will be open for inspection at the warerooms on Dundas St., at any time. You are invited to call.

W. D. MIDMER.

A fine display of manufactured lumber, window sash, doors, verandah pillars, interior builders' supplies and other matters that add so much to the fine appearance of the houses, outside and inside, occupied the booth at the old stand which W. D. Midmer had as in former years. We understand that extensive operations in the woods and in the factory this fall and during the coming winter will assure an ample supply of the best materials required by those intending to make alterations or repairs. The prices are right. Call or write for quotations and estimates.

Mr. Midmer has just returned from an extensive and intensive tour of the British Isles for the purpose of securing coal suitable for Canadian requirements and while there he got in touch with the right people and made arrangements for an ample supply. This coal is exported from Great Britain under government analysis and tests and these can be seen at any time at Mr. Midmer's office. The coal secured is the best substitute for Pennsylvania Anthracite, and of much higher fuel value than most of the coal coming here from the United States. For sale in car lots only. Prices range from $15.50 to $18.00 per ton delivered on cars. Write for full particulars to W. D. Midmer, Napanee, Ont.

THE BABY CLINIC.

Under the auspices of the Napanee Women's Institute, the Provincial Board of Health established a Baby Clinic at the Fair and mothers with children availed themselves of the privilege of having their children carefully examined to find out the condition of health of their little ones. This work was in charge of Dr. W. J. Bell, assisted by Nurse Osborne, and they are both thoroughly imbued with the importance of their work and thoroughly competent to give expert opinion and advice as to the proper method to be adopted to overcome defects.

Advice was given in feeding and hygiene. Dr. Bell very courteously gave information to the representative of this paper and a demonstration of how the work is carried out and tabulated. The object is to find out the condition of the health of the children; to remedy the defects before they become chronic and disastrous to their future life. To make useful citizens out of weaklings. To make useful men and women out of those who might become a burden to themselves and to their parents and friends if their condition of ill health were not remedied. In every case where a defect is found the child is referred to the family physician for treatment. No charge was made for these examinations.

The Express extends to Dr. W. J. Bell and the Baby Clinic every good wish for the efforts put forth.

THOSE who employ us have the assurance that they will receive the highest degree of service and satisfaction. We are equipped to handle a commission in a thorough manner. Our services are dependable and polite.

BIG FIRE IN DUNDAS.

Largest Mill of Its Kind in Canada Destroyed.

DUNDAS, Ont., Sept. 18.—Fire, which started suddenly Sunday night from unknown causes in the plant of the Colville Feed & Milling Co., Ltd., which concern is the largest mill in the Dominion manufacturing stock feeds exclusively, resulted in almost total loss of the $125,000 plant and stock.

Hon. F. C. Biggs, Minister of Highways for the Province of Ontario, is the president of the company. J. H. Charles, the vice-president and general manager of the firm, resides in Toronto on Evelyn street.

The Minister of Highways was one of the spectators of the fire; while Mr. Charles, the manager, not knowing the fire was in progress, was with his family motoring from Toronto to Dundas, having started from Toronto at seven o'clock in the evening.

The fire, which broke out at eight o'clock, raged decently for a good two hours and was quite spectacular. The conflagration was efficiently fought by the firemen of the Dundas fire brigade under the leadership of Fire Chief Joseph Hourigan. Fortunately no one was injured as a result of the fire. The great water pressure was of tremendous value, it was stated, in keeping the fire within the bounds of the factory grounds.

The insurance carried, it was stated, was 60 per cent. of the value of the plant. The company's office and the building containing the finished product on hand escaped the flames.

There is much conjecture over the cause of the fire, due to the report that there was no fire going in connection with the furnaces or machinery when the blaze started. The factory employed fifteen people.

KING CALLS CABINET.

Must Consider Problem of Canada's Response to War Call.

OTTAWA, Sept. 18.—Almost eight years after the first Canadian division sailed from Quebec to participate in the war against Germany, a Canadian Government is called upon to consider what shall be Canada's attitude toward the grave situation which has arisen in the Near East. Premier King, who returned to the capital on Sunday after his visit to Kitchener and to his own constituency of North York, has called an extraordinary meeting of the available members of his Cabinet to discuss the difficult problem now brought before the Government and the Dominion. The meeting will be attended by the Prime Minister himself, Sir Lomer Gouin, Hons. J. A. Robb, Charles Murphy, Jacques Bureau, H. S. Ireland, George Graham, D. D. Mackenzie, and James Murdock. Hon. A. B. Copp and Hon. J. H. King, the Minister of Public Works, are in Western Canada, and Hon. W. C. Kennedy, the Minister of Railways, is still in the hospital recovering from the effects of an operation. Hon. C. S. Fielding and Hon. Ernest Lapointe are in Europe in attendance at the assembly of the League of Nations. The cabled report that Britain had invited the overseas Dominions to contribute military contingents to aid in maintaining the neutrality of the Dardanelles came to Ottawa in circles in Ottawa, in which the seriousness of the Near East situation had not been realized. It has not been indicated to what extent the Dominion's assistance is required, nor is it clear, as it was in 1914, what is the sentiment of the Canadian people toward the latest development in Southeastern Europe.

FORD CLOSES FACTORY.

Huge Army of Men Are Thrown Out of Employment.

DETROIT, Sept. 18.—Henry Ford's industrial strike against what he charges are excessive coal prices was in full swing Saturday night, and approximately 73,000 of his workmen in the Detroit district were out or jobs for an indefinite period. Thousands of others in assembling plants throughout the country also were ordered to lay down their tools. In addition, a score or more of small industrial concerns here dependent upon the Ford Motor Company for orders were preparing to close. These employ upward of 30,000 men.

Most of the factories likely to be affected by the closing of the Ford industries through the loss of their chief market are located in Detroit or nearby Michigan cities. They manufacture various parts and accessories not produced by the Ford shops, and, in most cases, are equipped only for this work.

Officials of the Ford Motor Co. are hopeful that the near future will bring developments in the coal crisis that will permit a resumption of operations, Edsel B. Ford, president of the company, said Sunday night. The basis of this hope, however, Mr. Ford did not divulge.

Canadian Company Still Open.

WINDSOR, Sept. 17. — Wallace R. Campbell, vice-president and treasurer of Ford Motor Co. of Canada, Ltd., when asked whether or not the Canadian company would take any action following the announcement that the Detroit plants in and around Detroit would be closed, refused to give out any statement, other than that the Canadian plant will not close immediately.

No Franchise for Hindus.

VICTORIA, B.C., Sept. 18. — A resolute on the open sale of beer and liquor was introduced this morning demanded in a resolution passed here Friday by the city Liberal Association. The convention, which was addressed by Premier John Oliver and Hon. J. D. King, Federal Minister of Public Works, also went on record as opposed to the granting of the franchise to Hindus in British Columbia, and approved the policy and progress of the Federal Liberal Government in its first session of parliament.

BOMB DESTROYS HOME

Hamilton Is Alarmed by Black Hand Crime.

Second Attempt That Has Been Made on Life of Prominent Italian by an Unknown Gang—No One Was Injured But House and Surrounding Buildings Were Badly Damaged.

HAMILTON, Ont., Sept. 18.—The home of Diceazo Napoli, 32 Simcoe street west, was badly wrecked at 2.30 o'clock Sunday morning, when a heavily charged time bomb, placed at the front door by members of a local Italian Black Hand gang, exploded. The occupants of the house escaped injury, but the home and surrounding buildings were badly damaged.

It was the second unsuccessful attempt of the gang to take the life of Napoli. When he resided on Ferris street a bomb was exploded at his front door, but Napoli and his family escaped, although the house was damaged. Detective Sayer, who is working on the case, believes that it is the work of a Black Hand gang, and referred to the threatening letters which the owner of the place had received. Napoli hasn't the slightest idea of whom the guilty party or parties might be, and is unable to furnish the detective with any important information bearing on the case.

Called to the scene immediately after the report, the police found only the remains of the shell and splinters of wood and glass, which were strewn about the street for some distance. Adjoining houses were damaged, windows being broken and curtains and blinds were torn down. Napoli, his wife and two boarders were in the place at the time.

Residents stated that the whole street appeared on fire when the bomb burst into flames. There was a noise of crashing glass and men, women and children rushed out into the street, crying for help.

At the home of C. Smith, 341 MacNab street, 16 doors away, a smashed, window sash was torn from a neighbor's house and carried thirty feet in the air. A piece of wood went through a window at 28 Simcoe street, and landed on a bed where a mother was sleeping with two children. Miraculously, they escaped injury.

Inquiries were made by the police and no one appears to know when the bomb was placed at the house. Apparently it was not hurled from a motor, as no one heard a machine. It is as though it was put there earlier in the evening and carefully timed. The police are satisfied that an experienced gang are responsible for the trouble.

NOTED FINANCIER DEAD.

R. B. Angus Passed Away In His Ninety-Second Year.

MONTREAL, Sept. 18. — Richard B. Angus, past president of the Bank of Montreal, a director of that institution and of the Canadian Pacific Railway and other large corporations, died early Sunday evening at his country home at Senneville, near Montreal, in his 92nd year.

Mr. Angus had been confined to his bed since July and was conscious almost to the end and able to recognize the members of his family. The funeral will be held from his late residence, Drummond street, Tuesday afternoon.

In the death of Mr. Angus, Canada loses a citizen who did much for the development of the Dominion by the successful carrying through of the Canadian Pacific Railway, a corporation which held his keenest interest. Last year, in his 91st year, he attended the annual meeting of the company. The qualities of judgment and balance which he brought to all questions were early evidenced in his career as a banker. Starting with the Bank of Montreal, 65 years ago, as a junior clerk, he rose in ten years to be general manager. Later he identified himself with the bank as a director, finally becoming its president, from which position he retired in 1913.

Endorse Christian Healing.

PORTLAND, Ore., Sept. 18.—The principle of Christian healing was endorsed by the house of deputies of the Protestant Episcopal Church in the United States, in general convention here.

Resolutions adopted at the Lambeth conference in 1920, which recommended that churches take up Christian healing and that clergymen make a study of it, were read, firmed, and the deputies adopted another resolution providing that a joint commission of six bishops, six elders and six laymen, three of whom are to be physicians, shall make a further study of healing and report at the next triennial convention.

Harsh Peace Terms.

PARIS, Sept. 18.—The Turkish armistice terms were made public Saturday in a semi-official despatch from Angora, seat of the Nationalist Government. They are:

1. Greece to withdraw its army from all territory claimed by the Turks, abandoning its arms, munitions and supplies unconditionally.

2. Greece must recognize Turkish sovereignty in Asia Minor and Thrace.

3. Greece must pay indemnity for all damage suffered by the Turks.

4. All parties named by the Turks as guilty of atrocities must be surrendered by the Greeks.

FACE WAR WITH TURKS

Great Britain Calls Dominions to Send Contingent.

Kemalists Are Threatening to Attack Neutral Zones In the Dardanelles Unless Thrace Is Returned to Turkey—Reports of Massacre of Foreigners In Smyrna.

LONDON, Sept. 18.—Great Britain has invited Canada and the other British Dominions to be represented by contingents in the British force taking part in an effective defence of the neutral zone in the Near East.

The British Government has also addressed a note to Roumania, Jugo-slavia and Greece, seeking their participation in the defence.

The semi-official announcement of the invitation to the Dominions is id that they had been invited to participate "in the defence of those interests for which they have already made enormous sacrifices."

This announcement followed the semi-official statement that the British Government has adopted the attitude that the effective and permanent freedom of the Dardanelles is a vital necessity.

The British Government insists that the Straits affect British interests, European interests and world interests of the first order. Satisfaction is expressed that the British views are shared by France and Italy, which are the other two great powers principally concerned.

The complete unity of the allies has created confidence here of a successful approach to the solution of the Near East complications. While this unity exists, Kemal is not expected to attempt any offensive action which would involve his forces in military conflict with the allies. The British Government has noted with great satisfaction the prompt response of the Australian and New Zealand Governments to the invitation to share in the defence, if necessary, of the Gallipoli Peninsula.

Active steps are being taken to complete the organization of the strong allied forces, naval and military, to enforce the continued neutrality of the Bosphorus and Dardanelles, and the immediate concentration of military forces at critical points may be looked for.

There is very little direct news from Smyrna, and it is not yet certain that all British residents have been evacuated safely. It was known that most of them had got away, but with the loss of their effects.

No further word from the Cabinet has been called at present. The Prime Minister returns to London to-day. It may be taken that there is no longer any probability that Lloyd George will be able to visit the Geneva Conference of the League of Nations.

The next phase in the Turk-Greek situation, should there be no hostile military action by Kemal's force in the Straits, will be the formation of the proposed peace conference, probably in October.

Messages received in London from Athens and elsewhere through news agencies give the following further reports of scenes in doomed Smyrna.

Refugees say that the Kemalists spared no atrocities in their onslaughts on Jews. Massacre and incendiarism were the order of the day, and were carried out by groups of Turkish soldiers. Private houses and stores were looted by soldiers and civilians, and afterward set on fire.

Mutilated and burnt corpses were everywhere to be seen, and the atmosphere was poisoned with the stench of burnt flesh arising from the ruins. Women and girls were taken to the outskirts of the town and massacred. Since Thursday no Armenians have been seen in Smyrna Some doubtless are in hiding, but it is feared that even infants have been massacred.

The quay on which were concentrated panic-stricken and trembling refugees presents the most tragic human spectacle imaginable. Groans and agonizing cries of the wounded and dying are heard on all sides, and all are suffering from hunger and thirst.

Boats and lighters to carry the refugees to available ships are insufficient, and many attempting to reach the ships have been capsized and drowned, while others were shut from the quay.

A number of the refugees, particularly the women, became insane. It is impossible to learn the number of lives lost, but the lowest estimate given by any eye witness is 30,000 to 40,000. Large numbers of Greeks and Armenians were summarily shot on a charge of having helped the Greek army or of having committed imaginary crimes.

No Anthracite for Canada.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 18. — In a letter to Congressman Steenerson, of Minnesota, in reference to the alleged selling of coal across the Canadian boundary at exorbitant prices, Federal Fuel Distributor Spencer says there is no anthracite moving to the Canadian ports from this country, and the amount which might be offered over the boundary from Canada is very limited.

Mr. Spencer says he has asked W. M. Mahoney, representing the Department of External Affairs of Canada at the British Embassy to investigate the situation and will advise Congressman Steenerson further when the investigation is completed.

Sentenced for Shooting.

WINDSOR, Sept. 18.—Thomas Waters, a farm hand, employed by Joseph P. Vezina, at Jackson's Corners, near Windsor, was sentenced Saturday to six months in jail by Magistrate Nelson Tousignant, in a quarrel. As Waters had been held 12 days by the police in the county jail awaiting trial, his term has already expired. Tousignant's injuries were not severe. Waters was ordered to pay the costs of the trial.

Rock Pile for Speeders.

KINGSVILLE, Ont., Sept. 18.—In future, all rock pile will be the destination of speeders who are convicted in Kingsville court. Magistrate Smart said at the time Harley Beaman appeared for a hearing. Beaman got off with a $20 fine, but Magistrate Smart said he was the last who would thus lightly escape.

"You scoundrel! Aren't you human? Go tell her it's only a couple of punctures, not a blowout." He sighed. "Isn't it sweet of her to weep over an old hunks like me!" he added softly. "Bless her tender heart!"

"Who is she?" Ricardo was very curious.

"That's none of your business. You wait and I'll tell you. She's the guess if told you I was going to bring a finger, and that's enough for you to know for the present. Vaya, you idiot, and bring her in here, so I can assure her my head is bloody but unbowed. Doctor, throw that rug over my shanks and make me look pretty. I'm going to receive company."

His glance, bent steadily on the door, had in it some of the alert, bright wistfulness frequently to be observed in the eyes of a terrier standing expectantly before a rat hole. The instant the door opened and Dolores' tear-stained face appeared, he called to her with the old-time commanderie, for he had erased from his mind, for the nonce, the memory of the tragedy of poor Don Juan Cafetero and was concerned solely with the task of banishing the tears from those brown eyes and bringing the joy of life back to that sweet face.

"Hello, Seeress," he called weakly. "Little Johnny's been fighting again, and the bad boys gave him an all-fired walleping."

There was a swift rustle of skirts, and she was bending over him, her hot little palms clasping eagerly his pale, rough cheeks. "Oh, my dear, my dear!" she whispered, and then her voice choked with the happy tears and she was sobbing on his wounded shoulder. Ricardo stooped to draw her away, but John Stuart bent upon him a look of such frightfulness that he drew back abashed. After all, the past 24 hours had been quite exciting, and Ricardo reflected that John's inamorata was tired and frightened and probably hadn't eaten anything all day long, so there was ample excuse for her hysteria.

"Come, come, buck up," Webster soothed her, and helped himself to a long whiff of her fragrant hair. "Old man Webster had one leg in the grave, but they've pulled it out again."

Still she sobbed.

"Now, listen to me, lady," he commanded with mock severity. "You just stop that. You're needing your sympathy; and while, of course, I enjoy your sympathy a heap, just pause to reflect on the result if those salt tears should happen to drop into one of my numerous wounds."

"I'm so sorry for you, Caliph," she murmured brokenly. "You poor, harmless boy! I don't see how any one could be so fiendish as to hurt you when you were so distinctly a non-combatant."

"Thank you. Let us forget The Hague conference for the present, however. Have you met your brother?" he whispered.

"No, Caliph."

"Ricardo."

"Yes, Jack."

"Come here, Rick, you scheming, unscrupulous, blood-thirsty adventurer. I have a tremendous surprise in store for you. The sweetest girl in the world —and she's right here——"

Ricardo laughingly held up his hand. "Jack, my friend," he interrupted, "you're too weak to make a speech. Don't do it. Besides, you do not have to." He turned and bowed gracefully to Dolores. "I can see for myself she's the sweetest girl in the world, and that she's right here." He held out his hand to her. "Jack thinks he's going to spring a surprise," he continued maliciously. "Quite forgetting that a good soldier never permits himself to be taken by surprise. I know all about his little secret, because I heard you mourning for him when you thought he was dead." Ricardo favored her with a knowing wink. "I am delighted to meet the future Mrs. Webster. I quite understand why you fell in love with him, because, you see, I love him myself and so does everybody else."

With typical Castilian politeness he took her hand, bowed low over it, and kissed it. "I am Ricardo Luiz Ruey," he said, anxious to spare his friend the task of further exhausting conversation. "And you are——"

"You're a consummate jackass!" groaned Webster. "I'm only a dear old family friend, and Dolores is going to marry Billy Geary. You impetuous idiot! She's your own sister, Dolores Ruey, Sta. Marie Tenaja, and I think simple cause for common complaint against the world because the reports of our death have been grossly exaggerated. She didn't perish when your father's administration executed Miss Ruey, this is your brother, Ricardo. Kiss her you damn' fool—for the love, Miss Ruey—oh, Lord, nothing matters any more. He's current! Everything up and ruined my party. I so'n I were dead."

Ricardo stared from the outraged Webster to his sister and back again. "Jack Webster," he declared, "you aren't crazy, are you?"

"Of course, he's the old dear," Dolores cried happily, "but I'm not." She stepped up to her brother, and her arms went around his neck. "Oh, Rick," she cried, "I'm your sister. Truly, I am."

"Dolores. My little lost sister, Dolores? Why, I can't believe it!"

"Well, you'd better believe it," John Stuart Webster growled feebly. "Of course, you can doubt my word and get away with it, now that I'm flat on my back, but if you dare cast aspersions on that girl's veracity, I'll murder you a month from now."

He closed his eyes, feeling instinctively that he ought not spy on such a sacred family scene. When, however, the affecting meeting was over and Dolores was ruffling the Websterian forelop while her brother pressed the Websterian hand and tried to say all the things he felt, but couldn't express, John Stuart Webster brought them both back to a realization of present conditions.

"Don't thank me, sir," he piped in pathetic imitation of the small boy of melodrama. "I have only done me duty, and for that I cannot accept this purse of gold, even though my father and mother are starving."

"Oh, Caliph, do be serious," Dolores pleaded.

He looked up at her fondly. "Take your brother out to Mother Jenks and prove your case, Miss Ruey," he advised her. "And while you're at it, I certainly hope somebody will remember I'm not accustomed to reposing on a center table. Rick, if you can persuade some citizen to put me to bed, I'd be obliged. I'm dead tired, old horse. I'm—ah—sleepy——"

His head rolled weakly to one side, for he had been playing a part and had nerved himself to finish it gracefully, even in his weakened condition. He sighed, moaned slightly, and slipped into unconsciousness.

CHAPTER XVII.

Throughout the night there was sporadic firing here and there in the city, as the Ruey followers, relentlessly hunted down the isolated detachment of government troops which had escaped annihilation and capture in the final rout and fallen back on the city, where, concealing themselves according to their nature and inclination, they indulged in more or less sniping from windows and the roofs of buildings. Ricardo, who had taking no prisoners was an old one in Sobrante, and few presidents had done more than Sarros to keep that custom alive; ergo, firm in the conviction that to surrender was tantamount to facing a firing squad at daylight, the majority of these stragglers, with consummate courage, fought to the death.

The capture of Buenaventura was alone sufficient to insure a brief revolution, but the capture of Sarros was ample guarantee that the resistance to the new order of things was already at an end. However, Ricardo Ruey felt that the prompt execution of Sarros would be the added guarantee of peace by effectually discouraging any opposition to the rebel cause in the outlying districts, where a few isolated garrisons still remained in ignorance of the momentous events being enacted in the capital. For the time being, Ricardo was master of life and death in Sobrante, and all of his advisers and supporters agreed with him that a so-called trial of the ex-dictator could be a rather useless affair. His life was forfeit a hundred times for murder and treason, and to be ponderous over his elimination would savor of mockery. Accordingly, at midnight, a priest entered the room in the arsenal where Sarros was confined, and shrived him. Throughout the night the priest remained with him, and when that early morning march to the cemetery commenced, he walked beside Sarros, repeating the prayers for the dying.

Upon reaching the cemetery there was a slight wait until a carriage drove up and Ricardo Ruey and Mother Jenks. The sergeant in command of the squad saluted and was briefly ordered to proceed with the matter in hand; whereupon he turned to Sarros, who with the customary sang froid of his kind upon such occasions was calmly smoking, and bowed deprecatingly. Sarros actually smiled upon him. "Adios, amigos," he murmured. Then, as an afterthought and probably because he was sufficient of an egoist to desire to appear a martyr, he added heroically: "I die for my country. May God have mercy on my enemies."

"If you'd cared to play a gentleman's game, you blighter, you might have lived for your belly country," Mother Jenks reminded him in English. "Wonder if the beggar'll wilt or will 'e go through smilin' like my sainted 'Enery on the syme spot."

She need not have worried. It requires a strong man to be dictator of a roman candle republic for 15 years, and whatever his sins of omission or commission, Sarros was not lack animal courage. Alone and unattended he limped away among the graves to the wall on the other side of the cemetery and placed his back against it, negligently, in the attitude of a devil-may-care fellow without a worry in life. The sergeant waited respectfully until Sarros had finished his cigarette; when he tossed it away and straightened to attention. The sergeant knew he was ready to die. At his command there was a sudden rattle of bolts as the cartridges slid from the magazines into the breeches; there followed a momentary halt, another command; the squad was aiming when Ricardo Ruey called sharply:

"Sergeant, do not give the order to fire."

The rifles were lowered and the men gazed wonderingly at Ricardo. "He's too brave," Ricardo complained. "D—— him. I can't kill him as I would a mad dog. I've got to give him a chance."

The sergeant raised his brows expressively. Ah, the ley fuga, that popular form of execution where the prisoner is given a running chance, and the firing squad practices wing shooting. If the prisoner manages, miraculously, to escape, he is not pursued!

A doubt, however, crossed the sergeant's mind. "But my general," he expostulated, "Senor Sarros cannot accept the ley fuga. He is very lame. That is not giving him the chance your Excellency desires he should have."

"I wasn't thinking of that," Ricardo replied. "I was thinking I'm killing him without a fair trial for the reason that he's so infernally close to the pillows that a trial would have been a joke. Nevertheless, I am really killing him because he killed my father—and that is scarcely fair. My father was a gentleman. Sergeant, is your pistol loaded?"

"Yes, General."

"Give it to Senor Sarros."

As the sergeant started forward to comply Ricardo drew his own service revolver and then motioned Mother Jenks and the firing squad to stand aside while he crossed to the center of the cemetery. "Sarros," he called, "I am going to let God decide which one of us shall live. When the sergeant gives the command to fire, I shall open fire on you, and you are free to do the same to me. Sergeant, if he kills me and escapes unhurt, my orders are to escort him to the bay in my carriage and put him safely aboard the steamer."

Mother Jenks sat down on a tombstone. "God's truth!" she gasped, "but there's a rare plucked 'un. Aloud she croaked: "Don't be a bally ass, sir."

"Silence!" he commanded.

The sergeant handed Sarros the revolver. "You heard what I said?" Ricardo called.

Sarros bowed gravely.

"You understand your orders, Sergeant?"

"Yes, General."

"Very well. Proceed. If this prisoner fires before you give the word, have your squad riddle him."

The sergeant backed away and gazed owlishly from the prisoner to his captor. "Ready!" he called. Both revolvers came up. "Fire!" he shouted, and the two shots were discharged almultaneously. Ricardo's cap flew off his head, but he remained standing, while Sarros staggered back against the wall and there recovering himself gamely, fired again. He scored a clean miss, and Ricardo's gun barked three times; Sarros sprawled on his face, rose to his knees, raised his pistol halfway, fired into the sky and slid forward on his face. Ricardo stood before his body until the sergeant approached and stood to attention, his attitude saying:

"It is over. What next, General?"

"Take the squad back to the arsenal, Sergeant," Ricardo ordered him coolly, and then turned back to the still uniform cap. He was smiling as he ran his finger through a gaping hole in the upper half of the crown.

"Well, Mrs. Jenks," he announced when he rejoined the old lady, "that was better than executing him with a firing squad. I gave him a square deal. Now his friends can never say that I murdered him."

He extended his hand to help Mother Jenks to her feet. She stood erect and felt again that queer swelling of the heart, the old feeling of suffocation.

"Steady, lass!" she mumbled. "'Old on to me, sir. It's my bally haneurism. Gor'—I'm—chokin'——"

He caught her in his arms as she lurched toward him. Her face was purple, and in her eyes there was a queer fierce light that went out suddenly, leaving them dull and glazed. When she commenced to sag in his arms, he eased her gently to the ground and laid her on her back in the grass.

"The nipper's safe, 'Enery," he heard her mumble. "Safe, safe! An' as for 'ids, s'elp me—she's back where—you found 'er—'Enery——"

She quivered, and the light came creeping back into her eyes before it faded forever. "Enery—carn—darlin'," she whispered; and then the soul of Mother Jenks, who had a code and lived up to it (which is more than the majority of us do), had departed upon the ultimate journey, and Ricardo gazed down on the hard old mouth, softened now by a little half-smile of mingled yearning and gladness: "What a wonderful soul you had," he murmured. And closed her eyes.

In the end she slept in the niche in the wall of the Catedral de la Vera Cruz beside her sainted 'Enery

CHAPTER XVIII.

Three days passed. Don Juan Cafetero had been buried with all the pomp and circumstance of a national hero; Mother Jenks, too, had gone to her appointed resting place, and El Buen Amigo had been ordered forever. Ricardo had issued a proclamation announcing himself provisional president of Sobrante; a convention of revolutionary leaders had been held, and a provisional cabinet selected. Every one of the national elections had been named; the wreckage of the brief revolution had been cleared away, and the wheels of government were once more revolving freely and noiselessly. And while all of this had been going on, John Stuart Webster had lain on his back, staring at the palace ceiling and absolutely forbidden to receive visitors. He was still assigned to the mid-afternoon gymnasics on the third day when the door of his room opened and Dolores looked in on him.

"Good evening, Caliph," she called. "Aren't you dead yet?"

It was exactly the tone she should have adopted to get the best results, for Webster had been mentally and physically ill since she had seen him last, and needed some such pleasantry as this to lift him out of his gloomy mood. He grinned at her boyishly.

"No, I'm not dead. On the contrary, I'm feeling real chirpy. Won't you come in and visit for a while, Miss Ruey?"

"Well, since you've invited me, I shall accept." Entering, she stood beside his bed and took the hand he extended toward her. "This is the first opportunity I've had, Miss Ruey," he began, "to apologize for the shock I gave you the other day. I should have come back to you as I promised, instead of getting into a fight and scaring you half to death. I hope you'll forgive me, because I'm paying for my fun now—with interest."

"Very well, Caliph. I'll forgive you on one condition."

"Who am I to resist having a condition imposed upon me? Name your terms. I shall obey."

"I'm weary of being called Miss Ruey. I want to be Dolores—to you."

"By the toe nails of Moses," he reflected. "There is no escape. She's determined to rock the boat." Aloud he said: "All right, Dolores. I guess Bill won't mind."

"Billy hasn't a word to say about it," she retorted, regarding him with that calm, imperadnal, yet vitally interested look that always threw him frantic with the desire for her.

"Well, of course, I understand that," he countered. "Naturally, since Bill is only a man, you'll have to manage him and he'll have to take orders."

"Caliph, you're a singularly persistent man, once you get an idea into your head. Please understand me, once for all; Billy Geary is a dear, and it's mystery to me how such a splendid lad world isn't perfectly crazy about him, but every rule has its exceptions—and Billy and I are just good friends. I'd like to know where you got the idea we're engaged to be married."

"Why—why—well, aren't you?"

"Certainly not."

HONORED EccIS HEMON.

His Novel Wins Its Way Among the World Classics.

Whatever the Dominion Immigration authorities may think of the efern life of Northern Quebec as pictured in "Marie Chapdelaine," there is interest in the fact that a few days ago the citizens of Chapleau, to the north of Lake Superior, decorated the grave of Louis Hemon, the author of that book, for it was there that the almost unknown young Frenchman was buried after he was killed in a railway accident at that point on July 8, 1913.

"We may well be proud, we people of Chapleau," said the Rev. Father Gascon on this occasion, "to have the remains of this gifted young writer with us, and I thank both branches of the Canadian Club for having thought to observe the anniversary of his death. Such is the glory of man. During his lifetime no one knew of him, but now he is dead his fame is great, not only in this country, but in many other countries as well."

Already, it is said, the sales of "Marie Chapdelaine" have reached 400,000 in France, and the New York Times sees much significance in the success of this epic of the Quebec wilderness written by one of the same race which sent the early explorers into the northern part of the New World.

"This scholar," says the Times, "son of a university professor, born in Brest, carried not only the light of France into the Upper Canadian clearings, but also its love for the simple folk, who, with primitive heroism, still battle with the forest for enough soil to keep them alive and fit for further struggle. There are, in witness of this, to rise two monuments to the memory of this son of France who toiled in the wilderness of Upper Quebec; one in Canada and the other in Brittany, from whose coasts sailed Jacques Cartier, the first true son of France to enter the continent through the mysterious gulf of the St. Lawrence, and to see the towering cliffs of the gloomy Saguenay close behind him. Whether up at Peribonka, where the winter terrors of the great forest have changed the living body of Francois Paradis, the trapper of Mistassini, Maria's lover, 'into a thing of ice'; or near the lakes that have been rechristened Lake Hemon and Lake Chapdelaine; or at Quebec, the capital of the province, toward which he was traveling when death overtook him; whether at Brest or St. Malo or Dinant in Brittany; they are together to testify to something that is deeper than nationality even—to the consciousness of human kinship and common dependence upon a higher power."

MR. EDWARDS
MAPLEHURST FARM, HILLSBURST, P.Q.

"I am in my 78th year. About 25 years ago, I began to have trouble with my Stomach. One doctor said I had Cancer; another said, Ulcer of the Stomach; another, Gall Stones; others, Ulcers of the Liver and Inflammation of the Gall Bladder.

Three years ago, I consulted one of the best specialists in Montreal. He said I must go to the hospital, have an Ulcer cut out of my stomach and gall stones removed. I was then 74 years old. I said "NO."

Then, I began to take "Fruit-a-tives". I found they helped me a lot, and I still take them occasionally and I am so much better that my old friends often ask me what I have done to myself to look so well. I am gaining in weight and enjoying life very much"

SUMMER WARNINGS.

A Few "Don'ts" for Swimmer and Canoeists.

There are always numerous drowning accidents in Canada during the hot weather. Here is a list of "Don'ts" for the benefit of bathers and canoeists.

"It is estimated that 7,000, and more, persons drown on this continent yearly. Every summer brings with it an alarming toll in deaths from drowning—chiefly through accidents to persons who are not familiar with a few simple rules. Lack of knowledge of resuscitation methods is another cause of loss of life which might otherwise have been avoided.

"Fundamental in eliminating deaths from accidental drowning is the fact that every bather should know how to swim. Many persons who have never taken time to learn to swim come to disaster when in seeking escape from the hot weather, they fall into treacherous holes and drown before help arrives in time. The "rock-the-boat" pest would have fewer tragedies to his credit if more of his victims knew how to handle themselves in the water.

Following are the rudiments of water safety which every swimmer and canoeist should keep in mind:

"Don't swim on a full stomach. (Wait at least two hours after eating.)

Don't swim if overheated.

Don't swim until exhausted.

Don't swim if you have heart trouble.

Don't dive without accurate knowledge of the depth of water.

Don't struggle if caught in a swift current or undertow. (The force of the current will bring you to the surface).

Don't wade into the water with arms over your head. (You will not be ready to stroke if you step into a hole).

Don't lean backward when wading into the water. (Always be ready to fall forward.)

Don't cry for help in fun. (You may some time need help and not get it).

Don't fail to learn the Red Cross life-saving and resuscitation methods. (Be capable of saving yourself and your companions).

It is not necessary to pull into the waves back of a steamboat to show that you can handle a canoe.

The rudiments for canoeists are as follows:

Don't go canoeing if you can't swim.

Paddle quickly to the shore if you have a passenger who thinks it funny to rock the only foundation between you and death.

It might be well to be repeated for the millionth time—be satisfied with the seat you took when you started.

If you do capsize, don't try to climb back into the canoe; not many can do it.

Do not grab for anybody's neck. When the canoe rises, just lay hands on it and rest.

The paddle will do just as well. By holding the paddle before you in the water you can keep afloat until help comes.

Keep a cool head. If you can't do this stay out of a canoe.

BEST MIXED MARRIAGES.

Canadians Get on Well With British Mates.

Of all marriage intermixtures under the sun, there is perhaps none that can compare with the one between a Canadian man and a British girl, writes "A Canadian" in the London Daily Mail.

By a "Canadian" I mean a Canadian born, not an immigrant whose Canadianism is but veneer, and by British I mean a typical middle-class girl from a London suburb or county town.

As convoy officer in charge of hundreds of returning Canadian soldiers and their brides, and as a Canadian who has encountered hundreds of such marriages in Canada and elsewhere, I have tried to analyze the elements of their success.

The Canadian man is as near 100 per cent. male as we British girl is 100 per cent. female, and the result of this natural mating has been children as near 100 per cent. perfect, and almost invariably of the finest sort.

For a new country like Canada this is "a consummation devoutly to be wished." A man with a jackknife has cut away a number of the Dominion's finest branches, but it has only resulted in the production of more and better trees.

Having found the psychological situation to be undoubtedly favorable, it only remained to be seen how the Canadian would survive the transplanting process from their old to their new homes.

When they first arrived in Canada, they found things different; they were inclined to call them "funny" or "queer."

The trains were different, the stations were different, the money was different; there were no 'buses, no hedgerows, and no double-decked tramway-cars; only fences and street cars.

They felt themselves in foreign surroundings. In their "blue" moments they longed for the distance clothed in the scenes of their childhood in roseate colors.

The British love their islands and soon grow sick for them.

Canadians know this; they also know the remedy. The brides were sent home by their husbands to revisit old scenes.

At first they were happy in a realisation of their dreams, then they became aware that things seemed changed and incomplete, and then they had remembered them; they missed the telephones that were useful, the electrical housekeeping appliances, and most of all they missed "the man."

Finally, often before their time was up, they asked to be brought back.

Their daughters of Empire, as they may rightly be termed, are doing more to cement the bonds that hold the Commonwealth together than all the politicians that have ever served the consciousness of human kinship and common dependence upon a higher power."

Fletcher's Castoria is strictly a remedy for Infants and Children. Foods are specially prepared for babies. A baby's medicine is even more essential for Baby. Remedies primarily prepared for grown-ups are not interchangeable. It was the need of a remedy for the common ailments of Infants and Children that brought Castoria before the public after years of research, and no claim has been made for it that its use for over 30 years has not proven.

What is CASTORIA?

Castoria is a harmless substitute for Castor Oil, Paregoric, Drops and Soothing Syrups. It is pleasant. It contains neither Opium, Morphine nor other narcotic substance. Its age is its guarantee. Five Canadians Honored by Church In United States.

It is high time for some of the hyphenated to discover that former Canadians in responsible places in the churches in the United States are propagandizing for "England" and thus endangering American democracy—so numerous are the sons of the Dominion who have won distinction in the ecclesiastical realm of the Episcopal Church and her bishops, and the number of Canadians of episcopal rank is entirely out of proportion to the number of Canadians who have emigrated to the United States. There has been an export of consecration, brains and talent, but perhaps their willingness and ability to cope with missionary and pioneer conditions is the most famed, but perhaps their willingness and ability to cope with missionary and pioneer conditions is the outstanding marks of these Canadians. It is as missionary bishops that the sons of Canada shine and bring most lustre to the country of their origin. Bishop Charles H. Brent was almost a nationally heroic and patriotic figure as "Brent of the Philippines" before returning to Buffalo as Bishop of Western New York. Bishop Charles Scadding, born in Toronto, has in the diocese of Western Oregon one of the greatest fields for pioneering to be found on this continent. The latest to attract notice is Bishop Rowe, of Alaska, also a Canadian.

"Peter Trimble Rowe, the man who makes little trips of some 3,000 miles through the snow and ice, on snowshoes, making a beside his komatik to keep from freezing to death, or chopping down enough wood for a fire and calmly rolling himself up in his blankets and going off to sleep inside the circle of fire with the temperature anywhere from 40 to 60 degrees below zero, the man who is one of the best mushers in Alaska; the man best beloved by Indian, Eskimo and white man in Alaska; the man who has planted little churches all over that vast territory." — this is the description given a great son of Canada by a Boston newspaper.

While Bishop Rowe has been among the primitive folk most of his life, Bishop Scadding turned his back on New York and Toledo to enter upon life work among the lumbermen, fishermen and miners of the Pacific. Bishop Brent pioneered the church in the newly-acquired Philippines and then returned to a great home field. Bishop Anderson went from a small Ontario parish to a great suburban parish in Chicago and then to the bishopric of Chicago. Rt. Rev. Frank Du Moulin, himself one of the Canadian bishops, went to an Ohio parish and then became bishop coadjutor of Ohio.

Thus in many phases of activity these men labored and won honors through service. All are Trinity College men and all from Ontario. Son of the late Bishop of Niagara, Bishop Du Moulin was a Hamilton boy. The Bishop of Chicago was born Charles Palmerston Anderson in Kemptville. Charles Henry Brent was the son of Rev. Canon Brent of Newcastle. Some of them were commencing their careers at an age when there was little future seen in the homeland, when the expanding United States called for men to serve. But they maintain ties with Canada and their friends "back home" are legion.

"What manner of men are they?" "For the first time I saw Bishop Rowe you couldn't have told him from any of the rest of us roughnecks," says Governor Riggs of Alaska. "When we shipped a cog and swore he seemed to know exactly what we meant. I believe he would rather preach to a crowd of miners in a dance hall or saw-room than to a well-dressed cathedral congregation. It was in such places he could reach his people. He reached them."

SOME MORE TREASURE.

Hunters Might Now Try Their Luck at Long Point.

Treasure hunts are usually associated with the sea, but the story of one—mythical, perhaps — related to the members of the Norfolk Historical Society in Norfolk county the other day by Dr. J. H. Coyne of St. Thomas would form a fit subject for further exploitation. The visitors were being shown around the southern part of Norfolk, and had penetrated a wilderness of woods and bush, skirting the edge of Lake Erie, to visit a deserted farmhouse once occupied by Deacon Troyer, said to have been the first man to take up land in the county.

Dr. Coyne said the story had been told to him by the late Simpson McCall, owner of Seaman-Hall, who had heard it from Troyer himself when a lad of 11 to 12. The treasure had been buried about 1760 by a fur trader named Dismay, who had evaded a party of Indians who followed him along the shore from Port Stanley, knowing that he had a lot of gold in his canoe. Finally he got away from them, and buried the gold in his canoe. Finally he got away from them, and buried the gold on the ridge of Long Point.

"Deacon Troyer," said Dr. Coyne, "told Simpson McCall that he put on his high thinking-cap and located the treasure, and arranged somehow with the assistance of his boy to dig up the treasure on a certain night, and wanted Simpson McCall to go with them. He consulted his father, who did not believe in black art, and refused consent. But Simpson saw them start out from here in their canoe to go to Long Point to dig up the treasure, and he saw Deacon Troyer after they came back, and this is the story he told me:

"They went to Long Point, arriving just long enough before dark to locate the spot where the treasure was. They then waited until exactly midnight, and then started a procession, Deacon Troyer holding the open Bible before him, and his son following with a lighted candle, with spades, picks, etc. They dug down, and presently the pick struck metal. They got the pick under the lid of the box and pried it up. And then, at that moment a black shape rose up and assumed the form of a black dog, growing bigger and bigger, and they dropped their Bible and candle and rushed for the canoe, and never had any curiosity to return to the spot."

THE FARM LOAN SYSTEM

Government Plan for Developing Farm Property.

Loans Limited to Specific Purposes —Reasonable Rate of Interest for Long Term Loans—Helps to Straighten Estate Tangles—About Repayments.

(Contributed by Ontario Department of Agriculture, Toronto.)

On October 28th last the Agricultural Development Board passed the first loan under the long term farm loan legislation of the previous session. Since that time loans to the amount of about $800,000 have been passed.

In noting the progress as shown by the figures quoted it is necessary to remember that the loans are limited to certain specific purposes. Acquiring land, erection of buildings, straightening up an estate—these were the purposes for the original Act and loans up to 65 per cent. of the value of the property could be made. To these purposes have now been added the discharging of encumbrances where such encumbrances do not exceed 40 per cent. of the value, and the cost of installing the drains.

Three Features.

There are three features of the plan which have been commented on favorably by applicants. These are;

1. Money is available.
2. Rate of interest.
3. Amortization of repayments.

There has been a general impression that there was always plenty of money available in rural Ontario to finance all farm mortgages offered. This is not as true now in any section as formerly, and is not true at all in some sections. Victory bonds attracted large sums of money from rural Ontario and moreover developed an understanding of bonds and their advantages for investment which did not previously exist. Consequently many applications for loans have stated that there was now little or no money available in their community for farm mortgages.

Then the rate of interest at six per cent. is regarded as reasonable for a long term loan. It is, of course, two or three per cent. less than prevailing rates in New Ontario, and there is reason to believe that in old Ontario it has a stabilizing influence.

But the feature which seems to appeal to many is the basis of repayment. When the repayment is divided into annual instalments of principal and interest and spread over a period of twenty years it gives a sense of permanence and enables a man to meet his plan successfully. A payment of $7.17 per thousand dollars borrowed, will discharge the entire loan in 20 years, and this is not much more than the interest payments which would be asked in some cases otherwise. Most mortgagors are looking forward to paying the entire loan discharged long before the maximum period, but when they are told they can pay as much as they like one year after the third year they are quite satisfied.

As to Red Tape.

It is perhaps asking a good deal to expect a skeptical public to believe that any Government or semi-Government organization operates without red tape. Certainly it is the aim of this Board to do so. To comply with the Act and to see that the interests of the Province are properly safeguarded there are some conditions with must necessarily be rigidly insisted upon. Within these lines, however, the Board has endeavored to make the operation of the plan as simple as possible from the standpoint of the borrower. Sometimes there is a slight flaw in the title, making it necessary to get the signature of someone now several thousand miles away. It is in the interests of the borrower, as well as of the Board, that the title be made absolutely clear, even if it takes a few weeks to do so.

In this work it will be obvious that inspection and valuing is a most important part. The Board is expected and desires to serve the whole Province. Applying such a large territory with such a variety of conditions is a big job and the Board must necessarily place reliance on the information which comes to it from its inspectors.

Estates and Buildings.

One of the purposes for which loans are authorized under the Act is for straightening up estates, and this has been found an advantage in a considerable number of cases; for instance, where the property has been left to the oldest son, with instructions to pay off obligations to other members of the family.

In Old Ontario naturally the applications for loans to erect buildings have not been numerous, but a number of such applications have been passed. Here is a case of a hundred acre farm with buildings, put down as worth $7,500, free of debt. Yet the house is only valued at $200. Hence the owner secures a loan of $2,500 to build a new house and spreading the payments over a period of years will enjoy the additional comfort while it is being paid for. In other cases it has been a new barn or improvements to some of the existing buildings. Not many loans have been granted on small holdings.

Repayments.

Repayments are probably the final test of the success of any loaning scheme. No repayments are due under this scheme until next fall, and hence no evidence on this point is available. Every precaution has been taken, however, to assure repayment, and every borrower is given to understand that a loan is a business proposition and must be treated on a strictly business basis.

A good sire is the beginning of a good herd; a bad one is the end of any herd.

Notable Marksman Passes.

MONTREAL, Sept. 4.—With the death of Angus Cameron, which occurred on Thursday at 3269 Verville street, this city, in his 72nd year, there passed one of the most notable marksmen of the last generation. For ten years, between 1870 and 1880, his name ranked among the leading shots of his native Scotland, and among the individual prizes won by him were the Maltese Cross and the St. George Cross, the latter from a field of 3,000 competitors. He came to Montreal 35 years ago.

GOOD PEAS WIN FAVOR.

Bear Better When Given Support of Low Brush or Wire.

The very finest quality peas at the present time are either, strictly speaking, dwarfs, nor are they tall. They are intermediate and while they may be grown as dwarfs and without brushing, they bear better when given the support of low brush or a narrow strip of chicken wire. These are the Gradus and Laxtino types of pea, which vary from 30 inches to almost four feet, according to variety. All do better with support, although commonly grown as dwarfs. They give a heavier yield when held upright.

Of the very early peas of the wrinkled type, which is much superior to the earliest smooth-seeded type, Little Marvel still holds a high place among really dwarf peas, the vines being only about eighteen inches. It matures in eight weeks and is very hardy and of the finest quality. A little earlier is Market Superfine Prolific and Maud S., smooth-seeded peas, still remain the earliest of all, of good quality if taken very young, but not equal to the wrinkled varieties, which are not so hardy and cannot be planted or cropped so early.

Method of Brushing Peas.

It is possible with the variety of peas now on the market to plan a good succession planting, starting with Alaska, Surprise, Little Marvel, Gradus, Laxtonian and Thomas Laxton.

However, it is better to depend upon a succession planting a week or ten days apart, as the season may be such as to bring the cropping of different peas too close together at maturity. Planted at the same time,

The planting of peas in double rows, six inches apart, these double rows to be three feet apart, is about right for the more dwarf varieties, but if the more vigorous growing dwarfs are to be planted they will need at least four feet between the rows unless they are given brush or wire.

The round seeded peas can go into the ground as soon as it can be dug, but it is best to wait a week or two for the wrinkled varieties to be on the safe side.

The peas should not be planted this year in the same position that they occupied last year. Neither should they be due. It could not grow after the previous season by beans for best results. A gardener should study his garden plan each year with an eye to moving the peas and keeping the garden, so that they will not occupy the same space in succeeding years. Where successful cropping partly makes up for the exhausting of the soil, but it cannot wholly do so. These two vegetables take more out of the soil than the others and it is more necessary to see that they rotate.

Topping Tobacco.

The height and time at which a tobacco plant is topped exert a very appreciable influence upon the quality of the final product as well as upon the yield. For early uniform maturity the plant should be topped just as soon as the bud appears or the number of leaves it is desired to leave on the plant have developed sufficiently to permit the operation to be performed, says D. D. Hagen of the Dominion Tobacco Station. Allowing the flower stalk to become long or flower out before topping retards maturity and has a tendency to increase the proportion of leaf to stalk. Moreover, the stalk shows a marked tendency to become woody very rapidly if the bud is allowed to remain on the plant too long, and as a result the development of the leaves is not so rapid or complete on a late topped plant as on one topped at the proper time. For that reason late topping frequently results in a decreased yield.

On account of variants and undersized plants it is usually necessary to go over the field twice at different dates in topping. The second time the plants will be topped about two leaves lower than those topped at the first operation in order to make the field ripen more uniformly.

Silk Production In Ontario.

The possibility of the production of silk within the borders of Ontario, on an economically profitable scale, is extremely remote, according to a bulletin issued by the Ontario Department of Agriculture. Recently a number of mulberry trees were sold in Ontario by a Belgian Silk Corporation of Hamilton. Extensive Inquiries here and in the United States, states the departmental report, have shown that it is improbable that the trees offered for sale are sufficiently hardy to stand the Canadian climate and that even if silkworms were grown in any quantity, the cost of cheap labor of the sort that is available in Oriental countries would make preparation of the raw silk a practical impossibility.

CHEAPER LOANS HELP

How the Ontario Loan System Helps Farmers.

An Interesting Illustration Given—Helping the Tenant—Some Applicants Disappointed—Inspectors Are Carefully Selected.

(Contributed by Ontario Department of Agriculture, Toronto.)

To help young men of farming experience, farming inclination and inadequate capital to get properly settled in farming was one of the reasons for the new farm loan legislation now being administered by the Agricultural Department Board. Already it is possible to point to cases where monies have been advanced for this purpose.

How It Worked In One Case.

In one of the best Western Ontario counties two loans were placed which illustrates the finest development in Ontario farm life. A father, for many years a progressive and successful farmer, was anxious to get his two sons comfortably located. Both boys were in their twenties and both married. Both had been brought up on the farm, and of the older it was said he "worked on the farm all his life except while away at the war." With the aid of the father and loans, only about half the value of the property, both boys acquired farms. One has a farm of 185 acres, valued under $20,000, with excellent buildings and full equipment of stock and implements. Adjoining, the other boy has two hundred acres, not valued quite so high because the buildings are not quite so good. He also has a full equipment of stock and implements. The properties are registered in the names of the boys respectively, and they are responsible for carrying on operations and making payments on the mortgage. They are settled down as full-fledged citizens, with a splendid opportunity for happiness and success, and enough responsibility to act as a steadying influence. At the same time, the father remains in his home nearby to give the boys the benefit of his experience and maturer wisdom.

Helping the Tenant.

It should be the ambition of every man who works on the land to own the land he works. That many tenants entertain this ambition there is no doubt, and it is only a question of accumulating sufficient to finance from 25 per cent. to 40 per cent. by the Board. The tenant has the necessary stock and implements and in all probability a good deal of money to mind a case in one of the Central Ontario counties. The man was living on a rented farm of 175 acres. He knew the soil, the crops and local conditions, he knew exactly what he could do. The owner of the farm had it mortgaged and the mortgage was due. He could not pay it. The holder of the mortgage insisted and was about to foreclose. The owner offered the tenant the chance to sell at a pretty reasonable price. The tenant came to the Board, and the loan he was able to get with his own savings enabled him to take care of his annual payments on the loan will be less than the annual payments he was making in rent.

The Disappointed Ones.

Not all the loans asked for are granted. The loans thus far asked for and refused by the Board aggregate $884,000. At one Board meeting nine applications were passed and thirteen refused. Undoubtedly the great bulk of these were declined because they did not come within the purposes permitted by the Act. In the first place no loan can be made except on the security of first mortgage. Before the legislation of the recent session, application for loans to discharge mortgages had to be declined. Now a number have to be declined because they exceed 40 per cent. of the value as determined by the inspector. Not infrequently an applicant who comes within the 40 per cent. limit wants an additional thousand dollars to discharge "a note at the bank," and thus consolidate his indebtedness. But an "encumbrance" under the Act must be "a registered encumbrance," and the bank note does not qualify, however desirable the applicant may have considered the security. Sometimes an applicant wants a few thousand dollars to buy cattle for feeding, but the same negative must be given. Then there are the cases which are rejected because the Board is not satisfied with the personal or material security offered. When such conclusions are reached they are reached with much regret, for the Board is seriously anxious to assist rural agricultural development by means of these loans wherever it can possibly be done with due regard to reasonable security to the Province.

Inspectors Are Carefully Selected.

In view of the importance of having this information complete and accurate, great care has been exercised by the chairman in selecting inspectors. The plan followed is to utilize local men very largely, not necessarily one in each county, but at least one in a district of two or three counties. Already a list of fifteen or twenty men of integrity, hence offered for sale are sufficiently hardy and of sound judgment have been secured and payment made on a basis of a number of days actually employed in the work. Moreover, steps are taken from time to time to check up the work of inspectors by visits to counties not their sources, and if an inspector is found to be extravagant in his valuations or influenced by considerations other than the strict merits of the case, his services are no longer utilized.

Soap Bubbles Aids Science.

Every one who buys gasoline for his automobile has a direct concern in the efficiency of engines, the study of which is being assisted by soap bubbles, according to Popular Mechanics Magazine. These are now being used at the Bureau of Standards in determining the rate of propagation of flame in combustible mixtures of gases. Strangely enough, for years there has been sought a means whereby explosions could be studied under constant pressure free from complicating circumstances, but it has just recently pointed out at the Bureau that soap bubbles afford a ideal medium what is wanted.

CULTURES FOR SILOS

Helping Out Poor Fodders Turned Into Ensilage.

Lactic Acid Cultures Now Applied—Good Fodder Requires No Treatment—Sealing the Silo—Make a Compost Heap of Garden Rubbish.

(Contributed by Ontario Department of Agriculture, Toronto.)

Attempts have been made to control or direct acid bacteria. Bacillus lactis acidi has long been known to be beneficial in silage making, and its product, lactic acid, is found to the extent of one per cent. in well made silage. Experience has demonstrated that the addition of bacillus lactis acidi in quantity to the fodder as the silos were being filled gave good results, particularly so when the fodder material was past the best stage for making high-grade silage. The addition of the bacillus lactis acidi in quantity to the more or less spoiled fodder provided an active agent to check and override the other bacteria present and thereby control the fermentative process, and bring the silage mass to a fairly uniform condition with lactic acid predominant in the silage.

Add Lactic Acid Culture.

This addition of lactic acid culture to the fodder at the time of silo filling is easily accomplished by procuring a small quantity of a pure culture for lactic acid, from a creamery as a beginning. This pure culture obtained from the creamery is placed in a three-gallon can of clean skimmilk. This is placed in a warm position for three days. It can then be added to more skimmilk, increasing the bulk sufficiently to have one gallon for each load of material that goes into the silo. This skimmilk culture carrying a vast number of bacillus lactic acidi is sprinkled over the fodder as the silo filling proceeds.

Good Fodder Requires No Culture Treatment.

If the corn is in prime condition for silage making at the time of ensiling, nothing is to be gained by adding culture, however its use is strongly advised if the corn or other fodder is a bit off in condition due to damage through unseasonable weather, delays, etc.—L. Stevenson, Sec. Dept. of Agriculture, Toronto.

Sealing the Silo.

Several methods of sealing the silo after it has been filled have justified their use. What is wanted is a heavy blanket of material on top as near air tight as possible. A Minnesota writer says:

Some times weeds or heavy green grass are run through the cutter as a finishing layer. Some prefer to jerk the ears from the corn, but two or three loads of corn used so no grain is lost, and allow the corn itself to make the air-tight layer needed to preserve the silage. Straw is also often used, a good practice to tramp the silage around the edges at intervals of three or four feet during the filling process. This helps to prevent the settling away from the wall, which often occurs.

Spoiling at the surface may be prevented entirely by covering the top of the silage when filling is completed with a layer of tar paper cut to fit snugly around the wall and overlapping between the strips. If this is used, it is advisable to weight it with some material or other of any kind or with boards. Most farmers, however, think the use of corn itself with the ears removed and with proper tramping is the more economical than the use of paper.

In filling the silo the usual recommendation is to keep the surface higher at the center than the edges and to do most of the tramping near the wall. The last two feet had best be kept about level with the same amount of tramping in all parts of the silo.

MAKE A COMPOST HEAP.

Save the Garden Rubbish and Make Cheap and Valuable Manure.

Garden waste, decayed vegetables, dead vines, weeds, and the organic dunnage that comes about the place during a busy summer may be cleaned up and put to work again through the agency of a compost heap. Start the heap by laying down a bed of stable manure which has not been burned or heated. The size of the plot will vary with the amount of refuse to be composted, although if the bed is made 8 feet long by 6 feet wide and 2 feet deep it will serve the purpose. Over the manure spread a two-foot layer of refuse and cover with another layer of manure. This last layer need be only a foot in thickness. Repeat the layers until all the waste has been disposed of and then cover the whole with a layer of earth.

If it is desired to add to the heap from time to time the top layer may be opened and the new material emptied into the hole thus made.

Especially for the suburban home where there is no animal to consume the kitchen waste. In the spring the heap is simply adding enough manure to insure heating. Compost is especially valuable for use in hotbeds and cold frames.

A flock of scabby sheep will infect the roads, trails, sheds, yards, bed grounds and pastures, and the soil around the watering places. It is therefore important that the flock receive proper treatment as soon as the disease appears, before the infection becomes scattered.

Sneezing.

Sneezing was the subject of much superstition in the ancient world, and almost always endowed with sinister import. Jewish folklore has it that in the first ages of the world sneezing was always a presage of death until the coming of Jacob. That astute patriarch, anxious lest he himself should perish from such an insignificant cause, besought the Almighty to endow sneezing with more beneficent attributes, and since then it has been lucky to sneeze between noon and midnight.

THE KAISER'S CROWN.

Perhaps This "Symbol" Has Never Existed.

That there never was a German or Prussian crown in the sense in which that symbol of rulership is generally conceived, a bejeweled piece of headgear, passing from father to son, from generation to generation, intact and intangible, has been asserted by a writer in the Berliner Tageblatt, disputing recent research of what is to become of the Hohenzollern properties. The article reads in part:

"For as long as can be remembered German emperors were constructed for each new ruler who ascended the throne, and after the act of coronation it was often immediately taken to pieces. It was very rare for a Prussian ruler even to make any further use of his crown after the coronation. Frederick the Great, the most intelligent of the Hohenzollerns, had his crown taken to pieces immediately after his coronation in 1740, and Queen Elizabeth Christine, and he turned the diamonds and pearls over to the queen for private use.

"Only after the death of Frederick the Great did it occur to the court circle that, according to ancient ceremony, the crown was necessary for the burial services, so the stock of family jewels was gone over in a hurry and 'a' crown assembled. It consisted of what there was on hand a metal form of a crown, the so-called carcasse. After the interment this crown was at once dismantled. Furthermore, Frederick the Great had the insignia of the chain of the Order of the Black Eagle, founded in 1701, which was valued at 184 'Reichstaler,' melted down, together with some old crown 'carcasses,' and made into a gold table service.

"In the history of the German crown a special chapter is filled by the 'little Saucy,' a diamond of 34½ carats. Frederick William I. added to more skimmilk, increasing the bulk sufficiently to have one gallon for each load of material that goes into the silo. This skimmilk culture carrying a vast number of bacillus lactic acidi is sprinkled over the fodder as the silo filling proceeds.

New Lace Which Promises to Be Well Received, Closely Resembles Fish Net.

Russian Motif in Trimming Is Pronounced—Patterns Executed in Beads, Metal and Silk.

The dress of the Russian peasant is not content with influencing cotton dresses, but has set its mark in a most pronounced way on the simple frock of silk or wool, states a fashion correspondent in the New York Tribune.

Models which have just been received from Paris show this influence exaggerated almost to the point of bizarreness. They are, however, extremely interesting from the viewpoint of fashions, as they embody ideas rich in suggestion and, of course, they are easily simplified and modified to meet many requirements.

Among the most elaborately embroidered new crepe de chine dresses are those which have Russian patterns executed in beads, metal and silk. Frequently the Russian motif is combined with other ideas, thus giving a tremendous opportunity for variety. The question of trimming is an important one at the present time, and in all trimmings an entertaining variety is seen.

Manufacturers are doing an enormous business on beaded and embroidered crepe de chine dresses. The demand is easily explained by the wealth of new ideas at hand. The full amount of fun is exquisitely harmonizing and strikingly contrasting shades are run in the embroideries.

A typical model shows a combination of beaded blouse, or open-work dress, with Russian embroidery in solid work, the latter in high colors harmonizing with the foundation shade of crepe de chine. There is often an intermingling of beads, notably steel, amber or jet, these lending themselves well to the color harmonies of the bright embroidery silks.

Fringes are persistent. Designers who advocate them cannot be said to lack tenacity of purpose. Over a year ago the tide of fringe ran high, and such a wave of enthusiasm for everything fringed swept the whole country that every one thought they had sounded their own death knell. But what looked like the termination of the vogue for fringe was only the beginning—a preliminary showing, as it were. It must be said, however, that its use is now more subtle than it was in the old days when long streaks of plain silk fringe hung from the skirts and bodices of countless models.

Utilising Unmarketable Potatoes.

Unmarketable potatoes add succulence to the dairy ration. Where corn silage is not available and there are plenty of small potatoes, a peck a day will give an increase in milk flow. They should be introduced into the ration gradually and be run through a root cutter to avoid the possibility of choking the animal.

NEW FAN FOR THE EVENING

Two-Yard Tulle Scarf Is the Latest French Wrinkle in Way of an Accessory.

Without a stunning fan, an evening gown is incomplete as would be a rainy day costume without an umbrella. Fans grow more and more gorgeous and the latest French wrinkle is a two-yard tulle scarf, attached to the outer stick of a big feather fan—at the right-hand side of the fan. Spread open, the huge fan is held in the right hand and the tulle scarf drops down over the skirt in a long loop which is caught up and twisted around the right arm. Or the tulle may be thrown around the shoulders and the fan held in the hand in some graceful position or other. It takes a little more practice to be able to manage a fan plus tulle scarf effectively—but the result pays.

PARIS FAVORS LONGER SKIRT

A Paris frock is known this season by its skirt length and the oddity of its sleeve. On formal and informal occasions the Parisienne wears her skirt ankle-length and her sleeves are the combination of the art of the Parisian dressmaker. For out-of-doors the straight, slim silhouette is quite generally adhered to, but for dinner, dance and theater the full-skirted basque gown is the prevailing mode. Sport and semisport clothes form an interesting part of the spring mode. Especial interest is displayed in knitted effects, which are worn quite generally, usually accompanied by a trim jacket, bright-colored sweater or a woolen overblouse. The simple one-piece frock made of roughened material is a favorite for general wear.—Designer.

One of the oldest residents in Tweed district passed away at her home in Sulphide on Sept. 2nd., in the person of Mrs. Peter Luffman. Deceased was born in Sheffield township on the 22nd of May, 1846. Returns received to date by the Department of Finance indicate a very general acceptance of the proposals for the conversion of 1922 Victory Bonds into new bonds bearing 5½ per cent. interest and running for a further period of five or ten years as desired. Many holders would like to take up considerably more of the new bonds than they have of the maturing issue, but this is not permitted as cash subscriptions are not being invited at this time. It is open, of course, for such persons to add to their holdings of 1922 bonds by purchasing them in the market or from holders who require the cash and then to surrender them for new bonds. It is known that this is being done.

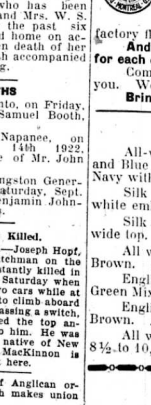
LINOLEUM FOR EVERY ROOM IN THE HOUSE

"Bedrooms"—If more people only knew how cheerful and cozy a good Linoleum makes a bedroom, nearly every bedroom would have a linoleum covered floor.



In Europe where Linoleum was first invented and used, nearly every floor in the home is covered with this beautiful and lasting material.

Waxing is the only finish used to any extent on the continent. The use of wax preserves the Linoleum and gives a soft, pleasing lustre to the surface, which is easily kept clean.

We have many lovely designs suitable for bedrooms, both in Linoleum and Oil Cloth, priced from 55c. per square yard to $1.10 per square yard.

Other floors which may be improved with Linoleum are : Bathrooms, halls, reception rooms, kitchens, dining rooms, living rooms, pantry, vestibules, etc., office and factory floors, churches and halls.

And there is a distinctive design, shade, and quality made for each of the above mentioned floors.
